Andrue Yeastman (sic). I worked for him 44 Days for 300 hundred acres of Land." This land was located in Wilmot, Lot 19. John received the deed for this property in 1796 and "raised" his house overlooking the Wilmot River, on the 12th of July, 1797. He built schooners, and flats which were small flat bottomed boats used for fishing for the people of the area whose names were: Schurman, Darby, Chappel, Baker, Mabey, Owens and Green.

"July the 24th Day 1793 I went to work on board of a Scuner (sic) for Governor Fanan (sic) And Worked Seven Days and ½ - £1 s17 d6".

"1793 By letters from New York and dated November, we have received accounts of the most devestating situation of Philadelphia occasioned by the fever which still continues to rage with greatest violence.

In the city by the latest accounts we understand between 4 and 5 thousand persons have fallen victim to this disorder. One hundred and fifty and upwards were sometimes cut down in a day. Many dead bodies lie in the streets there not being sufficient time to bury so vast a number, and many houses are shut up none being willing to venture into them, It is supposed that whole families lie dead in them."

Does this not seem a fullfillment of the Prophecy: that there should be wars and rumors of wars Famine and pestilence in the latter days. Surely it does. Oh what a condition must the sinners of Philadelphia be in. Where now will they go — What horror and misery attend them on all sides. They are afraid to indulge themselves in earthly pleasures and they are incapable of spiritual delight. Where now is the scoffer of religion the blasphemer and the profane. Methinks even these are now impressed with seriousness."

The account book also mentioned:

"The Dementions of ships" he built for Mr. Owens, Captain Baker, and Mr. Green in 1804 and other items of interest:

> "People tells me that I can get plenty of work building long boats and skiffs. The boat that Mr. Green sold is looked upon to be the best boat belonging to the Island. For they are forced to do thear own work They tell me if i follow turning, it is the best i can do both for the town and country. A sartin cure for the yalow Janders:
> Take one Handfull of goos dung and put it in a bottle and pour a quart of rum on it. Then take a tablespoon full of it morning and Evening and at noon if you like."

In 1803 John Small married Fanny Brimbel (sic), a daughter of Mrs. Sarah Bremble, a Loyalist widow, who had married Benjamin Darby, a Loyalist widower. They had one daughter, Sarah, named after her Grandmother Bremble. John was exceedingly proud of his smart little daughter as shown by the entries in his diary. "When she was five months old she could sit in the cradle and rock herself. When she was seven months and a half old she could walk alone and when she was two years and two months old she could tell all her alphabets, small and large. When she was five years and two months and seven days old she finished knitten a pair of stockings for herself. That was the 9th day of March, 1809."

In 1823 John made his will to which he added a codicil in 1830. He left fifty acres each to his son, John, of the Miramachi; his step-son, John Darby-Small; his daughter, Sarah; his wife, Fanny, and Benjamin Loes. The fifty acre lots were to be numbered 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 to be drawn for and then be considered entailed property which must descend to their heirs forever.

John died on December 18, 1830. He and Fanny were buried on their own farm. Their unmarked graves are about two hundred feet from the bank of the Wilmot River, on the east side of the lane behind Clark's Motel in Wilmot Village.

addresses of the record custodians, and some brief remarks relating mainly to the completeness and time period of the records. Everyone doing American research would do well to secure this valuable tool and use it. Another book I would recommend is Thomas Jay Kemp's Vital Records Handbook (Baltimore: Genealogical Publishing Co., 1988). This provides addresses of vital records offices, starting dates of the records, fees, and copies of application forms.

B. Before State-Wide Registration

Locating extant vital records in any state or registration area prior to the adoption of state-wide registration laws is usually a more difficult task. There were many differences in custom and practice even within the same state. Some places kept records very early; others kept no records at all until required to do so by state statute.

The most exhaustive attempt to compile a list of available vital records in the U.S. was made by the federal government's Works Projects Administration (WPA) as part of the Historical Records Survey projects in the late 1930s and early 1940s. Forty states participated in this program. The participants included all states except Alaska (not then a state), Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii (not then a state), Maine, Maryland, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, and Vermont. Each participating state published, as a result of the project, inventories or guides to the vital statistics records available for various counties, cities, and towns within its boundaries and told where and how they were filed. A "WPA List of Vital Statistical Records" issued in 1943 shows the publications for each of the participating states.

Copies of these inventories are available at various larger libraries and historical societies, especially in the states concerned. A list of the several inventories, including guides to inventories of church records (see chapter 20), follows:

ALABAMA:	"Guide to Public Vital Statistics Records in Alabama: Preliminary Edition." March 1942. "Guide to Vital Statistics Records in Alabama: Church Archives." May 1942.
ARIZONA:	"Guide to Public Vital Statistics Records in Arizona." August 1941.

SERGEANT JOSEPH SMALLWOOD

The date of Joseph Smallwood's arrival on the Island of Saint John is doubtful. His name does not appear on any of the Muster Rolls taken in 1783-1784. However, a Warrant of Survey dated September 22, 1784 ordered that 200 acres of land on Lot 56 be laid out for Joseph Smallwood, Loyalist, late sergeant in the Marine Corps.

The 1797 census shows Joseph living, not on his 200 acres grant of land on Lot 56 but on Lot 38 with a household of nine; three males under sixteen, who would be John, James and William; one male between sixteen to sixty would be Joseph, three females under sixteen would be Dorenda, Eleanor, and Mary and one female sixteen to sixty was his wife, Margaret McRobie. One wonders who was the female listed who was over sixty? All of Joseph and Margaret's children were baptized by Rev. Theophilus Des Brisay but the records in several instances record Margaret's name as Magdalen McRobie.

Joseph farmed his land on Lot 38, and when his daughter, Mary, was married Joseph's place of residence was given as St. Andrew's.

Following are the eight children of Joseph and Margaret Smallwood:

I John Smallwood (1786-1878)
John was born on January 23, 1786 and died on September 6, 1878 at St. Andrews. On June 21, 1813 he married Violet Owens at Five Mile House.

II Dorenda Smallwood (1788-?)

Honourable Joseph Smallwood, the former Premier of Newfoundland has graciously permitted us to quote the following from his autobiography, I Chose Canada.

> "The first Smallwood in what is now Canada was Joseph, my great-great-grandfather. He was a seaman, a master mariner, and the story of his life is succinctly set forth in his own statement to the Lords of the Treasury at Whitehall in London. It is dated December 14, 1778, at the seaport of Whitehaven in Cumberland County, England, and reads as follows:
> To the Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury —
> The petition of Joseph Smallwood, oldest son of Charles Smallwood, born in the County called Princess Ann County — near Norfolk in Virginia. — Humbly showeth.
> ...(indecipherable) ... said Colony of Virginia til the tenth day of October, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five when at the request of his father, who wished to prevent his being forced into the Rebel service and from his own disaffecton to the cause of Rebellion Your Lordships said petitioner left Virginia having obtained the Command of a vessel called the Neptune! belonging to Messrs. Eilbeck-Chambre-Ross Merchants of Whitehaven, in the County of Cumberland and Kingdom of Great Britain—that the said vessel under the command of Your Lordships' said petitioner was afterwards employed for near twelve months in the service of the government as a Navy transport, at the expiration of which time she was with many other vessels ordered home from N. York — and was discharged out of the service at Deptford — that Your Lordships said petitioner being then in the merchant service — and bound with the said vessel to Halifax — with orders to touch at Philadelphia on Head quarter with necessaries for his Majesty's forces was unfortunately captured by a Rebel American frigate of 32 guns — called the Warren — J.B. Hopkins Commander and was carried to Boston at which place he remained a prisoner during the space of three months — that during Your Lordships' said petitioner's captivity at Boston — when it was discovered that he was a Native of America — every endeavour was used on the part of the Rebels to make him a Convert to their principles — for which purpose the first Lieutenant of the said frigate the Warren — or the Command of a Rebel privateer was offered him — both of which he rejected and continued unshaken in his loyalty till at the end of three months he was exchanged at Rhode Island as a prisoner of War from whence he proceeded to New York and took the first opportunity of returning to England. —*
> Your Lordships petitioner, thus obliged to be a Refugee from his native country — being deprived of the assistance of his former employer thru the dissolution of the Commercial House of Eilbeck-Chambre-Ross & Co. — presumed from his knowledge of Your Lordships great goodness to many of his suffering countrymen under similar circumstances — with all humility to entreat Your Lordships to grant him such temporary relief as to Your Lordships shall seem meet — till a communication with America again opens — and ... (indecipherable) ... of his property ... without danger to his person — or disloyalty to his Sovereign.
> And Your Lordships petitioner, as in duty bound — will ever pray.
> JOSEPH SMALLWOOD.

> There appears to be no record of the response to Captain Smallwood's appeal for help; but if, as seems likely he had by his loyalty to the Crown forfeited property in America, and was now landless and jobless, the Treasury probably would do something to help. It would not be more than he asked for, temporary assistance, in any case."

JOHN STEWART

JOHN STEWART, the noted Island politician and historian, was born in Kintyre, Scotland, c. 1758, to Peter Stewart and his wife Helen MacKinnon. He arrived on the Island of Saint John in 1775, when his father was appointed to the colony's Supreme Court. The fact that the ship which had carried the Stewarts across the Atlantic was wrecked and the fact that young Stewart had been involved in a brawl on the way were an appropriate prelude to a career which was to win him the nickname, "Hellfire Jack".

Lieutenant Governor Walter Patterson was moved to call John Stewart "a very intemperate young man" when, stung by that official's seduction of his step-mother and bitterly opposed to the land policies he was promoting in the legislature, Stewart vigorously promoted the fortunes of the anti-Government "Country Party" during the election campaign of 1784. Patterson was defeated, and Stewart became speaker of the new Assembly.

It was during this early period that John Stewart obtained a commission as a Lieutenant in a military corps, H.M. Company of Saint John Volunteers, raised for the defence of the Island. In 1779 a regiment of Hessians was stationed in the Colony, and Stewart was appointed acting commissary. He became Captain of one of the Island Fencible Companies in 1794. This rank was temporarily reduced by sentence of a General Court Martial in 1797 for his attempting to have craftsmen from Public Works saw a threshing floor for his farm and for his challenging the Fort Major to a duel when he refused permission. Similar behaviour was observed on October 13, 1784 when he accosted Judge Thomas Wright on his way to the courthouse, and he physically attacked two justices of the peace on the same evening.

Colonel Edmund Fanning, Patterson's successor, allied himself with the Stewarts, and when he secured a favourable majority in the House, Stewart was chosen Speaker in 1795, a position which he held until 1801. More important was Stewart's appointment as Receiver General of the Quit Rents in 1790. This was a lucrative office as, according to Stewart, the Receiver was never called to account and could therefore pocket what he collected.

RICHARD ROBINS

Early records prove that families by the name of Robins resided in the American Colonies as early as 1670; Daniel Robins is listed as among the original settlers in Mommouth County, New Jersey, having been granted 173 acres of land. He also held various town offices such as Tax Collector and Constable. The Robins family came to America from England.

In the Revolutionary War we find Thomas and William Robins listed in the Continental Army, and Isaac, Jesse, John and Joseph Robins in the militia.

RICHARD ROBINS owned a farm and a comfortable home outside the town of Amboy, New Jersey. During the Revolutionary War, like so many others, he suffered greatly at the hands of the rebels for his loyalty to the British Crown. He was imprisoned and his animals, crops and provisions were confiscated by the rebels. His wife, (? Peton), died during the war and his eldest son, Ben, discouraged with trying to farm during the war, went to Kentucky, at that time, a wilderness. His younger son, John, was off serving with the King's Rangers on the Island of Saint John. It was on that Island that Richard sought refuge. He, along with his Loyalist friends, Thomas Hooper and William Schurman, late of Shelburne, and his son, John Robins, were at Charlotte Town early in May of 1784 presenting a memorial to the Governor-in-Council asking for "singular choice" in different lots of land to be granted to refugees. No doubt they had looked the situation over in the Bedeque area, because the governor in his reply offered Hooper, Schurman (and any others he might choose for partners) leases of large areas on Lot 26 with the option of buying in 12 months time at the rate of two Spanish dollars an acre.

On Muster Roll No. 4, dated June 12, 1784 at Charlotte Town, we read: "William Robins age 60 Grant from His Majesty Bedeque Bay, Lot 26. Received provisions up to 20 April last at Shelburne. A refugee who lost considerable property in the Jerseys where he has sent for his family and remains on the Island." The name William was written in error for Richard. Richard and John Robins each drew 500 acres on Lot 19 (50 acres on the front of Wilmot Creek and 450 inland). August 4, 1784 was the date of the warrant by Governor Patterson to Thomas Wright, the surveyor. There was no mention of a land grant on Lot 26. By then John was on his way to New Jersey to fetch his sister, Isabella, in order that she might join her father that fall. However, they did not sail from New York until April, 1785 and arrived at Bedeque Bay early in June only to learn that their father had died in February that year, from exhaustion and cold.

The story, as recounted by his daughter to her grandchildren was that her father, in company with several others, had set out for Charlottetown following the shore, as there was no other road at that time. There had been a snowstorm which ended with a silver thaw which formed a crust over the water on the ice making every step an effort. Richard Robins, being a heavy man and not used to that kind of travel, became exhausted around the place now called Carleton. They decided to return and he travelled with them to Sea Cow Head, when he could go no further. The men who were with him stayed with him and helped him along but at last he convinced them to go on and leave him. The nearest place with a horse was five miles away. Before their return Richard had died. He was buried in a field near the shore on what is now a Montgomery farm, but was once his own land. His was the first Loyalist grave in that area. The following is the family of Richard Robins and his wife ? Peton:

I Ben Robins

Ben was born in Amboy, New Jersey and moved to Kentucky during the American Revolution.

II John Robins (1756-1797)

John was born in Amboy, New Jersey and died in Lower Bedeque. He was an ensign in His Majesty's King's Rangers, and was stationed in Charlotte Town with the First Battalion as a junior officer of the garrison on March 17, 1782. A letter signed by John and several of his fellow officers, which appeared in a New York newspaper of April, 1782, advised prospective emigrants that on the Island "soil was good, the water excellent, the harbours spacious, the government mild, the cattle plentiful". The battalion was disbanded in 1783 and John Robins returned to the Colonies to invite more Loyalists to settle on the Island, and also to escort his sister Isabella to their new home in Lower Bedeque.

According to the Muster Roll John Robins drew a land grant of 500 acres at Bedeque Bay, Lot 26 on June 14, 1784. There was another grant on Lot 19 which was drawn on August 4. He had received twelve months provisons at Halifax. The land which was set apart for the Loyalists, at least the parts drawn by John and his father, was at that time a wilderness and each parcel consisted of fifty acres, bounded on Wilmot Creek, the rest back land on Lot 19. They preferred taking leases from the proprietors in a place which the French Acadians had formerly inhabited with quite large clearings, small houses and orchards, in what is now Lower Bedeque. John and his sister, Isabella, lived in one of these houses.

In 1788 John Robins married Mary, the eldest daughter of his neighbour, Thomas Hooper. Mary was also a native of New Jersey and arrived on the Island of Saint John soon after he and his sister did. It was not until May 1, 1792 that the one hundred acres they were living on, was conveyed to John and Mary Robins from the proprietors of Lot 26, Anthony and Robert Gordon of the Islands of Dominica and Saint Vincent. Later that year Mr. Gordon arrived on the schooner Betsey from Halifax to inspect his property and meet his tenants.

In January 1794 John appeared before the Legislative Council asking that the grant given to his father, Richard Robins, be distributed to his descendants residing on the Island. His petition was granted on May 6, 1803. In 1793 when England was at war with France, the Island of Saint John Corps of Volunteers was formed with John Robins among the Prince County Regiment officers. When he was baptized by Rev. DesBrisay on October 17, 1796, he was described as "late" lieutenant. He died less than a year later, leaving six small children for his wife Mary to bring up on their one hundred acres in Lower Bedeque. These children were:

A. Elizabeth who was born in 1789 and died in 1827. She married John Wright (c. 1789-1875), the son of Nathaniel and Ann Lord Wright of Bedeque. They were among the first settlers in Searletown. This property was called Birch Grove. (see Wright history).
B. Ann who was born in 1789 and died in 1827. In 1810 she married John Craig (1788-1852), son of William and Kennedy Copeland Craig. John had a general store and farmed in Lower Bedeque. They had a family of four sons and three daughters. John Craig's second wife was Elizabeth L. Owen of Malpeque.
C. Richard who was born in 1791 married Harriet L. Ruston from Nova Scotia. They, with five sons and three daughters lived in various places around Bedeque.
D. Maria who married as his second wife, Captain Thomas Moyse (1785-1864), a seaman from Devon, England. They lived and farmed in Central Bedeque. They had three sons and three daughters.
E. John who was born in 1795. No information is available.
F. Thomas who was born in 1796 and died in 1882. In 1827 he married Isabella Beairsto (c. 1809-1869) of Malpeque. Thomas settled in Central Bedeque where he farmed and raised a family of three sons and seven daughters. One son died in infancy.

III Isabella Robins (1768-1855)

Isabella Robins was born at Amboy, New Jersey and died at Lower Bedeque. She was sixteen years of age when she arrived on the Island of Saint John in June, 1785. Isabella was only eight years old when war was declared and her childhood years were filled with misery and horror resulting from abuse by the rebels. Her mother died during the war. When Isabella and her brother John arrived on the Island it was to find that her father was dead, a tragic shock to the young refugee. He was buried in the field near where she was destined to live. It is said that sometimes in her loneliness, she would take her work and sit on the grave. When she would be alone in the cabin during the first few winters, the bears would come and put their paws on the banking and look in the window. For many years it was difficult to raise sheep because bears and wildcats were so numerous.

By a license issued on October 13, 1787 Isabella married Benjamin Cole of Richmond Bay. He had been living there with his mother and step-father, George Penman, who came as paymaster of the garrison when Colonel Lord Rollo occupied the Island in 1758. After the fall of Louisburg, Penman returned with his family to settle in what is now Port Hill. Isabella and Ben settled on two hundred acres near her brother, John, on the south shore of Bedeque or Dunk River in what is now called Lower Bedeque. It was not until May 1, 1792 that Ben received the deed from the Gordon brothers, the proprietors of Lot 26. Theirs was a busy household. Isabella had no one to help with the care of the eleven children and the many duties of a pioneer mother. In an interview, shortly before her death, Isabella said: "To tell the ups and downs of my life in raising a large family would be uninteresting and commonplace".

Ben's death was recorded in The P.E.I. Register of February 5, 1825. "Died at Bedeque, Mr. Benjamin Cole, aged 63, one of the oldest inhabitants of that settlement".

Isabella passed away thirty years later on August 27, 1855. Her obituary in The Islander noted: "The deceased had eleven children, eighty-five grandchildren, 144 great-grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren". The following are Isabella and Benjamin Cole's three sons and eight daughters. They are not in order of birth:

A. Elizabeth was born in 1788 and died in 1866. She married Thomas Hooper, junior (1772-1837) son of Thomas Hooper. They lived at Lower Bedeque. (see Hooper history).
B. Sarah married Donald Montgomery, son of John and Ann Hooper Montgomery. They lived on a farm at Traveller's Rest, and had two sons and three daughters.
C. James was born in 1792 and died in 1873. His first wife was Margaret Clark of New Brunswick. He remarried Barbara Howatt (1782-1860) daughter of James Howatt of Tryon. James lived and farmed at Lower Bedeque. He and Margaret had two sons and one daughter.
D. Anne was born in 1794 and died in 1866. She married John Baker (1776-1852) son of John and Hannah Lewis Baker. (see Baker history).
E. Christiana was born in 1796 and died in 1869. She married Nathaniel Wright (1793-1860) son of Nathaniel and Ann Lord Wright. They farmed at Bedeque and called their home Fair View. (see Wright history).
F. Mary died young.
G. Isabella was born in 1800 and died in 1867. She married William Wright (1791-1867) son of Nathaniel and Ann Lord Wright. They farmed in Chelton, at that time a new settlement. (see Wright history).
H. Benjamin was born in 1803 and died in 1875 unmarried.
I. Richard married Esther Treen, daughter of William and Catherine Montrose Treen of Malagash, Nova Scotia. Richard farmed in Lower Bedeque until his death in 1847. He and Esther had two sons and three daughters. Esther remarried Joseph Sharpe of Linkletter.
J. Margaret was born in 1807 and died in 1883. In 1828 she married Dugald MacCallum (1795-1875) son of Archibald and Rachel McGougan MacCallum who came to Indian Point from Grand Rustico c. 1797. Dugald farmed in Lower Bedeque at what is now called MacCallum's Point. He and Margaret had a family of five sons and six daughters.
K. Amelia married Joshua Horton of Wallace, Nova Scotia in 1829. They ran a tavern in St. Eleanor's, later moving to Portland, Maine where Amelia died. They had one daughter and at least one son killed in the Civil War.

JOSEPH ROBINSON

JOSEPH ROBINSON was one of seven sons born to William Robinson and his wife Ann Gold, in the small country village of West Bromwich, Staffordshire, England in the year 1748. Little is known of his youth but one would assume that he spent some time as a blacksmith's apprentice, fo at the age of twenty-two he joined the H.M.S. Arethusa, as Armourer, fo a period of three years.

During his tour of duty on the H.M.S. Arethusa he visited the colonies and in 1763 stayed in New York where he received his discharge in the fall of the same year. He worked there for twelve years before he married Mary Smith on March 15, 1774. Mary was the only daughter of Lawrence and Jane Ruger Smith of New York.

After their marriage Joseph and Mary lived for a few years in New Jersey, where two sons, Hercules and Thomas, were born. Later they moved to Manhattan. In January, 1833, before a Select Committee on the Petition of the American Loyalists he testified "I was a gunsmith in New York, and lost property of considerable value by adhering to the loyal cause at the revolution, where I acted as a Guide during a great part of the war".

At the end of the War he and others who were loyal to the Crown, set sail aboard the H.M.S. Roebuck for Nova Scotia. Dissatisfied with conditions at their disposal they again set sail with twenty-five others from Shelburne for the Island of Saint John.

With Proclamations posted on the streets of Shelburne, offering lands to the Loyalists on the Island of Saint John, they probably felt dismayed and heavy-hearted upon disembarking in November to find Charlotte Town with four buildings, a few sheds and little food or shelter. The sloop Stag which brought them, offered to take them back. Why did they stay? Was it to save face from those they left behind at Shelburne, who were willing to wait a little more patiently to be looked after, or an iron will that if given a chance they would prove themselves, or was it perhaps a strong belief in their Maker that with His spiritual help they would endure? Whatever their reasoning they stayed but not without extreme suffering and privation.

Joseph Robinson's house in Charlotte Town was situated at the north-western angle of Queen and Dorchester streets. Church services were held there. Joseph was a follower of John Wesley and helped found the Methodist Society, which boasted four principal members, Benjamin Chappell and spouse, Mrs. Smith and himself. When new trustees were appointed on October 7, 1828 for the Wesleyan Chapel in Charlotte Town, Joseph Robinson was described as "Joseph Robinson the elder of Charlotte Town, in P.E.I. Gunsmith". He followed his occupation of gunsmith and blacksmith and dealt in real estate.

Joseph Robinson died at the home of his son, Thomas, at 'Brighton Lodge,' on February 20, 1836 at the age of eighty-eight. He was preceeded by his beloved wife, Mary, on January 7, of the same year at the age of eighty-four. Both are buried at Elm Avenue Cemetery, Charlottetown but the ravages of time have not left a marker to identify their graves.

He married his cousin, Elizabeth Jones Callbeck, (1838-1914), daughter of Philip and Elizabeth (Eliza) Warren Callbeck. They lived and farmed at Augustine Cove where their family of two sons and five daughters were born.

J. Charlotte, a spinster, and Theophilus McWilliams signed a marriage bond on September 14, 1863. No further information is available.

VIII Catherine Rhene Robinson (1789-?)

Catherine Rhene was born on April 23, 1789 at Charlottetown, and died young.

IX John Robinson (1791-1853)

John was born on June 9, 1791 and died on December 1, 1853. On March 3, 1816 he married Elizabeth Moore (1800-1878), daughter of Dr. David and Elizabeth Essex Moore of North River. John was a blacksmith by trade and resided with his family in a house on the property where the new Fire Hall is now situated on Kent Street, Charlottetown. While the Robinsons lived there, Masonic meetings were held in one of the upstair rooms, which was kept solely for that purpose. Later as their sons grew to manhood and expressed a desire to become farmers, John purchased McAusland or Peter's Island, later to become known as 'Robinson's Island,' situated north of Rustico. This little island was a gem, in that it boasted two miles of sand dunes for pasture land, a growth of soft and hard wood, cranberry bogs and two hundred acres suitable for farming. It also had a house and outbuildings. Here John settled his sons Peter Wendover and John William, and it remained in the family until 1937, when it was sold to the Government for a National Park.

About 1848 John Robinson moved to Mount Pleasant, Lot 12 where he became involved in shipbuilding. While on a business trip to St. Pierre, a French possession south of Newfoundland, a disastrous fire broke out threatening total destruction. Mr. Robinson organized a fire brigade and after strenuous labour succeeded in bringing the fire under control. For this heroic deed the French government presented him with a medal inscribed thus: " A JOHN ROBINSON RECOMPENSE DE SON DEVOUMENT LORS DU 11 OCTOBRE 1844 A ST. PIERRE DE TERRE NEUVE". "To John Robinson as a reward for his great and voluntary help on the occasion of the great fire at Isle St. Pierre on 11 October 1844".

John died at Mount Pleasant in Lot 12 of a hernia caused by a kick from a horse. He is buried in St. James Church Cemetery, Port Hill, Prince Edward Island.

Elizabeth Robinson had obtained from her father considerable knowledge of medicine, and during her lifetime treated and prescribed for many sick people. Among her remedies was one for cancer, and people from all over the province came to have the plaster applied. Elizabeth married Benjamin Murray as his second wife on October 2, 1859, and moved back to Robinson's Island. She died in December, 1878, while on a visit to her daughter, Elizabeth, Mrs. Duncan Shaw, and is buried in St. Mark's Church Cemetery, Rustico.

Among the treasured relics that remain of this staunch, pioneering couple are John's priceless medal, bayonnet and sword, and Elizabeth's mortar and pestle that she used for preparing her medicines. They had ten sons and four daughters:

A. Joseph Richard was born on June 29, 1816. Circa 1858 he married Mary Waite (1822-1911), daughter of George and Louise Rayner Waite of Lot 12. Joseph and Mary lived on the Western Road on one hundred acres that he received from his father. He died and was buried on January 29, 1866 in St. James Church Cemetery at Port Hill. Mary married a second time to Peter Carter. Joseph and Mary had

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL JOSEPH ROBINSON

On Wednesday, September 23, 1789 a schooner arrived at Charlottetown from St. John's River laden with Lieutenant-Colonel Joseph Robinson's baggage, and on Sunday, October 4, 1789 another schooner arrived with Colonel Robinson and his family from Bay Vert. Shortly after his arrival Colonel Robinson requested a town and pasture lot in Georgetown as he wished to develop there. This request was granted and a warrant of survey was issued on October 12, 1789. However, when the census of 1798 was taken, Colonel Robinson and his wife Leila were living on Lot 34. Colonel Robinson's home had been in South Carolina before the War of Independence, and during that time he had met Colonel Edmund Fanning there. When Colonel Fanning became Lieutenant Governor of Prince Edward Island, he persuaded Colonel Robinson to settle in this Province.

In 1798, at the request of the Right Honourable William Wyndham, Secretary of War for Great Britain, Colonel Robinson wrote the following account of his experiences in the American Rebellion: —

> "At the commencement of the American Rebellion, I was an inhabitant of the Province of South Carolina and was a Major of a Regiment of the King's Militia in Cambden District.
> The insurgents formed a camp in Ninety-Six District and were recruiting men, declaring that as soon as they had forces sufficient for their purpose they would burn and destroy the houses and property of all persons who refused to join them in opposing the King and the authority of Great Britain.
> I then waited upon Lord William Campbell, the Governor of the Province and received written orders from his Lordship to levey forces and march against the

> *But in the meantime the violence of the insurgents obliged Lord William Campbell to depart his Province and our small army of loyal volunteers was left without further orders, money or Military stores. Wherefore, with much reluctance, I was under the necessity of desiring the men to return to their respective habitations and by all means not to suffer any false pretenses of the Rebel party to deceive them or to efface their principals of loyalty until we should enjoy a more favourable opportunity. A reward being then offered for my life, personal safety induced me to retire to the Cherokee Indian Nation and aftewards to the Creek Indians; and passing through many dangers and suffering various hardships I at length arrived at St. Augustine in the Province of East Florida in the year 1777. Soon afterwards a party of about 300 men, being some of those I formerly commanded in South Carolina joined me there. I formed the Regiment which was styled The South Carolina Royalists of which General Prevost appointed me Lieut. Colonel and soon after I received my commission from Sir Henry Clinton, the Commander-in-Chief. The said Regiment acted in East Florida, Georgia and South Carolina in the course of which service I was in several engagements against the enemy. > Signed Joseph Robinson
> Lieut-Colonel of the late South Carolina > Royalists"

This letter was published on November 8, 1842, after the death of Mrs. Matilda Brecken, as it was felt that it would be of interest to many people at that time. Mrs. Brecken was the second daughter of Colonel Robinson.

An incident which occurred during the American Revolution was also recorded:

> "Upon one occasion a numerous band of the Rebel Party, during the absence of Col. Robinson, set fire to his house and burned it to the ground, Mrs. Robinson and her children having been rescued from the flames by the devotion of some of their slaves. An actor "in this diabolical outrage was recognized by Mrs. Robinson in this Island many years afterwards. He is since dead."

Colonel Robinson became prominent in Island politics. He was elected to the Assembly in 1790 and became its Speaker for four years until his appointment to the Legislative Council by Governor Fanning. He was also named Second Assistant Judge. When Colonel Robinson moved to the Island he leased 1000 acres of land on Lot 34 from Sir James Montgomery and became very sympathetic with the grievances of the tenants. With his son-in-law, Robert Hodgson, he championed the cause of the escheat movement.

Colonel Robinson died on August 24, 1807, aged fifty-nine. His wife Leila died on December 31, 1822, aged seventy-two.

In the Royal Gazette of November 8, 1842, the following tribute to Colonel Robinson was published:

> "Having sacrificed a valuable property in South Carolina to his unshaken principals of loyalty and attachment to the British Crown, Col. Robinson was possessed of great and versatile talents and made himself eminently useful in this community. He filled various offices of trust and importance. He was a Member of Council, Assistant Justice of the Supreme Court and Judge of Probate. He died in 1807 universally regretted and esteemed."

Colonel Joseph Robinson and his wife, Leila, had three daughters, Rebecca, Matilda and Eliza:

I. Rebecca Robinson (1770-1825)

Rebecca was born on September 27, 1770 and came with her parents to the Island of St. John in 1789. Eight years later, on June 17, 1797, she married Robert Hodgson, a young man whose career in the affairs of the colony was cut short by his early death. Robert Hodgson, Clerk of the Crown, Coroner and leading spokesman for the tenantry in the Assembly, died on January 5, 1811, aged forty-six years. He left his property to be divided equally between his wife and their five children, who were all under the age of twenty-one. His wife was named executor of his estate. Rebecca died in May, 1825 and left all her estate to her only daughter, Jane Deborah. Rebecca and Robert Hodgson were the parents of four sons and one daughter.

A. Robert Christopher was born in 1798 and was educated in Charlottetown and at King's College in Windsor, Nova Scotia. He studied law in Halifax and was admitted to the bar of Nova Scotia in 1819 and to the bar of Prince Edward Island the same year. He practised in Charlottetown, where in 1828 he was appointed Attorney and Advocate-General, as well as Judge of Probate. In 1840 he became a Member of the Executive and Legislative Council. During the Honourable Mr. Jarvis' absence in 1841, he became acting Chief Justice. On the introduction of Responsible Government in 1851, he resigned every public office except that of Surrogate Judge of Probate which office he continued to hold until he was appointed Chief Justice in 1853. In 1852 he was elected as Representative of Charlottetown in the House of Assembly. In 1869 Mr. Hodgson was knighted. In 1873 he was made Administrator of the Government for the second time. In 1874 he resigned as Chief Justice to accept the office of Lieutenant-Governor which he held until July 1, 1879.

Sir Robert had a long and successful career. For twenty-three years he was Attorney-General, for eleven years he was President of the Legislative Council, for twenty-two years a Member of the Executive, for seventeen years the Chief Justice, and he was twice Administrator of the Government. His judgement was so sound and his tact so unfailing that he was said to have never made an enemy. He was the first Island born Chief Justice, Knight and Lieutenant-Governor.
In 1826 Robert Hodgson married Frances (Fanny) MacDonald who died in 1832, aged twenty-eight years. They had one daughter and one son.

B. Joseph William was born on November 25, 1799 and died on December 8, 1850. He and his wife, Martha, had three daughters and one son.

C. Jane Deborah was born on March 6, 1802 and died at Keswick, Cumberland, England in 1887, aged eighty-five years.

D. Daniel Brecken was born on October 4, 1803 and died on July 21, 1883. He was a Protonotary and Clerk of the Crown in the Supreme Court. On November 22, 1832 he married Lydia Cambridge MacGowan. She died on May 18, 1835, aged twenty-five years. His second marriage was on January 31, 1839 to Mary Wright, who died on February 3, 1842. They had two sons. Daniel's third marriage on April 26, 1852, was to Margaret Leah Brecken, widow of the Honourable John Brecken.

E. William Christopher was born in 1806 and died on May 23, 1885 at Toowomba, Queensland, New South Wales, Australia.

ANTHONY ROGERS

Among the Rogers settlers of the Parish of North Esk, Northumberland County, New Brunswick were descendants of the Loyalist, Anthony Rogers and his wife, Zilpah Holcomb, who came to New Brunswick from Connecticut. Anthony Rogers lived at Simsbury, but was forced by the Rebels to flee with his wife and family to New York, which was the Loyalist stronghold. From there they sailed, in 1785, to Parrtown, now Saint John, New Brunswick where Anthony drew a town lot.

He presented a petition dated September 26, 1785 asking for land on the Miramichi for his sons, Anthony and John. He was informed that if the sons were of age and made personal application their request would be considered.

The Rogers family did move on to the Miramichi and on January 12, 1787 Anthony petitioned again, from Newcastle, on his own behalf as follows:

> "THE PETITION OF ANTHONY ROGERS humbly sheweth that your Memorialist hath purchased an improvement on a lot of Crown land which is not surveyed to any man and lies eastward of that lot of Mr. William Davidson's which is next below the grindstone quarry on the south side of the Northwest branch of the Miramichi River whereon your Memorialist hath made considerable additional improvements since he has purchased, and being desirous of making still further improvements, humbly beg your Excellency that he may have a title granted him to said lot."

Ten inhabitants signed as testimony to the truth of his petition, and it was found acceptable, but the land concerned, the later Lots V and W at Cassilis, was granted only in 1810 to John and Anthony Rogers, junior. Anthony Rogers, senior, lived until at least 1794. Further information of him or of Zilpah has eluded researchers. They had five recorded sons, James, Anthony, Anthony II, John and Edward, all believed to have been born at Simsbury, Connecticut, according to the records of the Reverend Roger Viets, Rector of St. Andrew's Church, Simsbury.

I James Rogers (1762-?)
James was born on March 2, 1762. 1780 was the latest date he was known to be alive.

II Anthony Rogers (c. 1766-?)
Anthony was baptized in 1766 and died in infancy.

III Anthony Rogers II (1768-?)
Anthony II was born on April 14, 1768. He married Lydia Ledden. 1845 was the latest date he was known to be alive.

IV John Rogers (1770-?)
John was born on August 9, 1770. He married Susannah Walsh and 1819 was the latest date he was known to be alive.

V Edward Rogers (1772-1858)
Edward was born on September 20, 1772 and died on April 27, 1858 at the age of eighty-five years. He married Jane Whitney who was born c. 1780 in New Brunswick and died at North Esk on May 21, 1853. Edward made his home ten miles down the Miramichi at Strathadam where he was a successful lumberman and farmer. During his long life he held practically every parish office: Assessor of Rates, Fish and Barrels, Member of the North West Boom Committee, Overseer of Roads, Pound Keeper, Surveyor of Lumber, Town Clerk and Trustee of Schools. In 1810 he was recommended by James Fraser, J.P., as a sober, honest, industrious settler at Miramichi, whom others might emulate.
Edward and Jane Rogers were the parents, it is believed, of nine children, two sons and seven daughters:

A. Anthony was born c. 1796 and was last heard of in 1871. He married Hannah ?. On August 9, 1824 Edward Rogers, senior, and Jane, his wife, deeded to their son Anthony, junior, one hundred acres on the north side of the Northwest Branch of the Miramichi. In the Parish of North Esk, Northumberland County, on the West bank of the North West Miramichi River, near Savogle River, Anthony Rogers is shown as having two hundred and eight acres, Edward Rogers had two hundred and five acres. In the same parish in a southerly direction from the above lands, near Silliker's, Anthony is shown as having two hundred and sixteen acres and Edward, two hundred and twenty-five acres.
B. Zilpah was born c. 1798. She married Donald McKay. She was last heard of in 1861.
C. Susan was born c. 1800 and died, it is believed, on April 10, 1878. She married Charles Tozier whose family also came to New Brunswick from Simsbury, Connecticut.
D. Lydia was born c. 1802 and married Danier Tozier. Lydia's death occurred on March 17, 1897.
E. Jane was born c. 1804 and married Edmund Clark. 1871 was the latest date Jane was known to be alive.
F. Sarah was born c. 1810 and died on October 1, 1884. Jared Tozier was her husband.
G. Charlotte was believed to have been one of the daughters. On September 9, 1835 she married Charles Mathews, of North Esk. Charles was a native of Argyleshire, Scotland. He died at the age of ninety-one. Charlotte died at the age of sixty-one. They had a family of nine children.
H. Annie Elizabeth was born on April 7, 1815. She married John Sinclair, and died in 1908.
I. Edward was born c. 1820. He married Elspeth Watt who passed away in 1890. According to the 1851 census for the Parish of North Esk, Edward, the only child living at home with his parents, was a school teacher. 1865 is the latest date he was known to be alive.

In 1789 John Stewart purchased part of Lot 37 from John Barker. There, on a magnificent location overlooking the Hillsborough and Pisquid Rivers, he built his country home, 'Mount Stewart.' It is from this estate that the present village of Mount Stewart takes its name. This location made Stewart a near neighbour of both Bishop Angus MacEachern at St. Andrew's and John MacDonald of Glenaladale at Tracadie. His relations with the church leader, in spite of his failure to vote in favour of the removal of the civil disabilities of Roman Catholics, seem to have been amiable. The story is told of how Stewart sometimes invited the Bishop to accompany him to Charlottetown in his large boat, rowed by servants in Highland costume, with a piper in the bow playing the bagpipes. MacDonald, however, had suffered from land policies which the Stewarts favoured and he, in particular, detested John Stewart "for being at the bottom of all the troubles on the Island". This antipathy culminated in their celebrated duel in Charlottetown when Glenaladale faced Stewart's "prodigious long cut and thrust sword" with only a small dirk. They were parted before any injury was done.

In 1804 Stewart left the Island to take up the duties of Paymaster General of H.M. Forces in Newfoundland. He remained there until the office was abolished in 1817. It was during these years that he probably rendered his greatest service to the Island with the publication in 1806 of An Account of Prince Edward Island. This won him the distinction of being the first Island historian. It was also while he was in Newfoundland that he married his second wife, Mary Ann James. Hannah Turner, the first Mrs. Stewart, was reported to have perished in a shipwreck off Antigonish, Nova Scotia, late in 1816. Many firmly believed that her ghostly figure haunted the gardens of Mount Stewart for years afterwards.

Upon his return to the Island, Stewart emerged as the leader of the opposition to the policies of Lieutenant Governor Charles Douglas Smith who had determined to enforce payment of arrears of Quit Rents before a proposed new scale was finalized. As Smith began foreclosing on the Proprietors, Stewart secured signatures to a petition calling upon the sheriff to call public meetings to consider what could be done. The most important meeting was held in Charlottetown's Queen's Square where a series of resolutions, framed under Stewart's chairmanship during the previous winter and highly critical of the Smith regime, was adopted. Under the protest that some of the charges were libelous, Smith tried to arrest Stewart and prevent his taking the resolutions to England. Stewart eluded him, esaping, according to tradition, in a cask as produce. On October 21, 1824, he returned to Charlottetown accompanied by Colonel John Ready, a new Lieutenant Governor.

His popularity at its height, Stewart became Speaker of the House of Assembly in 1825, and in 1828 he was reappointed Receiver General of Quit Rents. He was Speaker until 1830 and Receiver until the time of his death.

In 1825 he was chairman of a meeting which led to the founding of the Kirk of St. James, the first Presbyterian Church in Charlottetown.

On June 17, 1832, Stewart married Mary Rain, his second wife, Mary Ann, having died on May 10 of the same year. A daughter, Marguerite, later Mrs. John Stephens, was born the following year. Children of previous marriages were Magdalen, who became the wife of George Birnie, Stewart's London agent, and Captain Henry Stewart who predeceased his father. There was also a natural son, John, who died at Indian River on July 7, 1845. Shortly before his death an Inquisition de Lunatico Inquirendo declared Stewart to be of unsound mind. He died at Mount Stewart on June 22, 1834 and was buried in the old Elm Avenue Cemetery in Charlottetown.

JESSE STRANG

JESSE STRANG was almost certainly the son of Daniel Strang, a Revolutionary counter-agent for Loyalist Colonel Robert Rogers. Daniel was captured near the rebel camp at Peekskill, New York and hanged by revolutionary forces on Oak Hill, Peekskill, on January 27, 1777.

Daniel Strang, junior, (c. 1691-1741) was the son of Daniel Strang and Charlotte LeMaitre Strang who emigrated as French Huguenots via England to New York. Daniel, junior, married Phoebe Purdy and settled at Cortlandt, New York; their son, Daniel Strang, (c. 1714-1792), married Elizabeth Galpin and lived at Port Chester, New York. Daniel and Elizabeth Strang had eight children. One, Mary, was the wife of Jacob Silliker; another, the Daniel who was captured and executed, was probably the father of Jesse Strang, who accompanied his Aunt Mary and her husband, Jacob Silliker to Bedeque via Shelburne, Nova Scotia in 1784.

This data on the progenitors of Jesse Strang was furnished by J. Wesley Strang of Lower Freetown and by C.A. Strang of Milford, Connecticut whose genealogy of the family has appeared in the New York Genealogical and Biographical Record.

It is believed that Jesse Strang was born c. 1763 at White Plains, Westchester County, New York. He sailed to Shelburne in the fall of 1783, and on to the Island of Saint John in July, 1784 with other Loyalists under the leadership of William Schurman.

Jessy Strange, as he was listed on the "Muster Roll of Disbanded and Discharged Soldiers and Loyalists" was granted three hundred acres on the first day of April, 1789, forty acres "situate lying near the head of the Dunk or Bedeque Bay along the front of the water side and extending forty-eight chains, and the remaining two hundred and sixty acres lying inland." The original parchment deed is the prized possession of a great-grandson, J.

Wesley Strang who has done a great amount of research on Jesse Strang's numberless descendants.

The forty acre lot lay next to the farm of William Wright who had come with his family on the same vessel from Shelburne. Therefore, it was not surprising, that, by a license issued on October 24, 1787 Jesse married Sarah, second daughter in the Wright home. Five of their nine sons married back into the Wrights. Jesse, who donated the site for the Bedeque Presbyterian Church which stood in the middle of the present day North Bedeque Cemetery, was one of the elders of its congregation in the Princetown Parish in 1810, and sat in at meetings of session when straying members of the Presbyterian flock were cited to appear and account for conduct unbecoming in followers of Christ.

Jesse stated his reason for leaving his church and going with the Methodists was "that he could receive more benefit from their preaching". On June 9, 1818, the committee of elders submitted this report to the assembled session and the next Sabbath Reverend John Keir announced to the congregation that because of his conduct Jesse Strang was no longer a member of the church or session.

Jesse's interest in the Wesleyan way did not falter, and for the rest of his life he was a trustee and supporter of the little Methodist chapel erected in Lower Bedeque, across the river from the Presbyterian Church he had helped to build on his own land.

Like the other Bedequers of his day, Jesse was involved in shipbuilding and coastal shipping. On June 29, 1820 he sold Thomas Magher a fourteen ton schooner, the Mary Ann, built at Bedeque in 1816; in the document recording the transfer he is called "subscribing owner and master" of the ship.

Jesse and Sarah's sons and daughters were married and making their own way in the adjacent pioneer settlements when he died in June, 1836, several days after willing "to my loving wife Sarah, my house and farm whereon I now live, during her life... and at her death the whole of the said property to descend and succeed to my son Ephraim...". In 1855 Ephraim sold the homestead and moved to Burton, Lot 7 in Western Prince County.

The children of Jesse and Sarah Strang, all born at Bedeque, were:

I Daniel Strang

Daniel, who was willed forty shillings by his father's will, dated June 10, 1836, was no doubt named for his grandfather Strang. The following advertisement in the September 1, 1835 copy of the Royal Gazette is all that can be learned of Daniel after he went to New Brunswick:

"Bay Verte, Bedeque, and Charlotte Town Packet, the Schooner Christina, Daniel Strang, Master, will leave Bay Verte for Charlotte Town, on Tuesday, 8th September, and will return back to that place immediately after her arrival, and will continue that route once a month, should encouragement offer. She will leave again on her return from Charlotte Town, to the Bay Verte for Bedeque, and continue to run once a fortnight, between these places. For freight or passage apply to the master on board."

Apparently encouragement was not forthcoming and the Charlotte Town run was discontinued. The second notice advertised that the Christina would sail only between Bay Verte once a fortnight "For further particulars apply to Mr. John R. Gardiner, Bedeque or the Master on board."

II Mary Strang (1794-1866)

Mary, called Polly, was born in 1794 and died in 1866. She married James VanBuskirk, (1789-1858), son of Loyalist Jacob and Susannah Townsend VanBuskirk. (see VanBuskirk history).

III William G. Strang

William G. married Sarah Jane ? and lived probably at Saint John, New Brunswick. They had at least one son, Robert Newton, who was born in 1857.

IV Phebe Strang (1800-1880)

Phebe was born in 1800 and died in 1880. She married William Price of Lower Bedeque, son of Loyalist Richard and Anastatia Cody Price. They moved to New Brunswick and founded Price Settlement at Tabusintac. (see Price history).

V Jesse Strang (1803-1843)

Jesse, junior, was born in 1803 and died in 1843. He married a Miss Power. He lived at North Bedeque and died in his prime leaving a family of nine children, the younger ones were to be brought up by relatives. They were:

A. Sarah who was born in 1824 and died in 1885. She married Andrew Burns, son of William Burns. The Burns family of nine children grew up on the family farm at Lower Freetown but only three remained on the Island.
B. Ann who married a widower, Harry Hodgson of Lot 15 in 1847.
C. John who married his cousin Sarah VanBuskirk in 1843. They died childless.
D. Margaret Power who was born in 1826. She married John Strang in 1845.
E. Jesse III who was born in 1828 and died in 1854 of smallpox. He was buried at Ashdod Cemetery, West Duxbury, Massachusetts.
F. Rebecca who was unmarried.
G. William who was born in 1835 and died in 1908. His father's will stated that William was to live with his oldest sister and her husband. In his early teens he made his way to his uncle, David Power, of Wisconsin. He served in the American Army during the Civil War and later settled in Wisconsin. His first wife was Sarah Power, a cousin. His second, also a cousin, was Caroline Price, from Tabusintac. William had seven children. Approximately three hundred descendants attended a family reunion in Wisconsin in 1978.
H. David who lived with his uncle, Ephraim Strang. He moved to Oregon later, as did his brother, Robert.
I. Robert.

VI Nathaniel Strang (1804-1884)

Nathaniel, called Tanny, was born in 1804. He married Elizabeth Schurman in 1827. She was a daughter of Peter and Mary Bremble Schurman. Tanny was the contractor for building the wharf at Green's Shore, now Summerside, and completed it in 1839. Soon after Elizabeth's death he went to Massachusetts and settled at Duxbury where he married Mrs. Ruth Simmons. At the time of his death in 1884 at Duxbury, he was listed as a farmer. Tanny and Elizabeth had nine children:

A. Sarah Jane was born in 1828 and died in 1918. She married Thomas Reeves, (1827-1911), son of Simon and Sarah Taylor Reeves in 1852. They lived at Lower Freetown and had seven children.

William was born on November 30, 1792. He married Mary MacCallum, daughter of Archibald and Rachel MacGougan MacCallum. She was born on February 26, 1793 and died in 1875, possibly on January 17. William farmed at Sea Cow Head. He was a man of great vitality but died on July 20, 1875 at the age of eighty-two, of injuries received when thrown from his cart by a runaway horse. He and Mary had one son, Alexander, named for his grandfather Anderson:

A. Alexander was born on December 15, 1827 and died on December 18, 1899. On April 2, 1856 he married Isabella MacCallum daughter of Dougald and Margaret Cole MacCallum. She was born on February 21, 1831 and died on February 24, 1885. They farmed at Sea Cow Head which is now called Fernwood. They had a family of five daughters and one son:

(1) Mary was born on January 21, 1857 and died on July 16, 1921. On January 1, 1881 she married Charles Godfrey (1848-1929). They lived at North Wiltshire where their one son and one daughter were born. (2) Margaret was born on November 15, 1858 and died on July 5, 1908. She married on May 18, 1893 Albert Bell (1849-1933). They had no family. (3) Minnie Jane was born on May 3, 1861 and died on September 10, 1941, unmarried. (4) Annie Alice was born on November 18, 1863 and died on July 12, 1942. On March 6, 1895 she married Alexander Stewart Cairns (1865-1934). They lived at Lower Freetown with a family of three daughters. (5) Charlotte Geddie was born on April 24, 1865 and died on July 14, 1937. On October 27, 1886 she married George Franklin MacFarlane (1854-1937) and they lived at Fernwood. They had two sons and two daughters. (6) Alexander was born on May 18, 1869 and died on November 29, 1931. On July 18, 1906 he married Maud Price (188?-1959). They lived on the homestead at Fernwood and had no family.

Alexander Anderson (1795-1884)

Alexander, junior, was born on April 16, 1795. On February 5, 1829 he married Elizabeth Gribble Paten, who died on October 31, 1876. They had no family. Alexander, junior, was a Sea Cow Head farmer. The Royal Gazette of November 16, 1830 reported his appointment as a surveyor. In time he was to become one of the principal surveyors of Prince and western Queens Counties. He learned surveying from his father; their survey books and instruments are now owned by Douglas MacFarlane of Fernwood. Alexander, junior, was appointed a member of the Legislative Council of the province by King William IV. He was active in politics for a number of years, and at one time was Commissioner for Small Debts. He was also a Justice of the Peace. He seems to have had some involvement with shipping because the June 9, 1829 Register lists a ship for sale under his name. In the 1881 census Honourable Alexander Anderson is listed as living in the household of John Clay at Summerside where he died on September 20, 1884 at the age of ninety.

Researched and submitted by Winifred E. Cairns.

SAMUEL BAGNALL

There are many different spellings of the name Bagnall. Bagnall is a orland village of the parish of Stoke-on-Trent, Derbyshire, England, dates back, at least, to the 11th century. The family took their name m that place, but we are more interested in the one that came to the nd following the American Revolutionary War.

The following excerpt from Benjamin Bremner's Tales of Abegweit ge 33) reads as follows:

> "A concrete example of the many (still unfulfilled) promises made by those in authority to the Loyalists who sacrificed their earthly possessions in the United States rather than forsake their loyalty to the land of their ancestors is herewith given. The census of 1798 lists 'Samuel Bagnall' (the first one of the name in Prince Edward Island) as one of seventy eight heads of families in the Royalty of Charlottetown."

SAMUEL BAGNALL was born in Derbyshire, England. He was married in Staffordshire, and later removed to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. During the war of the Revolution he was a firm Loyalist, as the following attested evidence given by Mrs. Bagnall in the year 1833 before the commission appointed by the Government to inquire into the treatment accorded to the Loyalists fully proves:

> "I am the widow of the late Samuel Bagnall of Charlottetown, deceased. I am now eighty-four years of age and came to this island in 1787. My husband and I emigrated from Staffordshire, England to Philadelphia, and were in the United States when the first American war commenced. He was often solicited to join the Colonials but always refused. After some time he was taken prisoner by them and imprisoned eighteen months in Albany, when I was left unprotected with eight small children, upwards of one hundred miles from him, at a place called Three Rivers. We lost all our property which was taken from us by the Colonials and Indians. I was often threatened to be scalped and my children also, and was present when several persons were killed."
> "My husband was released on giving bail for two thousand pounds. We afterwards resided in Albany and subsequently removed to New York, where my husband was repeatedly solicited to become a citizen of the United States, but he steadily refused. We came with the Loyalists from New York to Shelbourne, Nova Scotia, where we heard of Governor Patterson's proclamation offering the lands of this Island on such favourable conditions that we were persuaded to come here."
> "On our arrival, and for many years after, in fact until his decease in 1810, my husband applied for a grant of land but was always put off by the many subterfuges resorted to by those in office at the time. He never succeeded in obtaining any land as a Loyalist."

The following claim was submitted by Bagnall according to information obtained from the Public Archives of Canada and procured by Mrs. Marion Morrow. (Audit Office 12 and 13 (MG 14) AO 13, bundle 11, reel B-2185 p. 151.)

SAMUEL BIRCH RIX

SAMUEL BIRCH RIX, progenitor of the Rixes of Prince Edward Island, arrived at Saint John, New Brunswick which was then part of Nova Scotia, in 1783. The memorial of Samuel Rix and his brother, Benjamin Rix, dated 2 August, 1786, at Saint John, contains the statement "that your memorialists are sons of Benjamin Rix, Quarter Master of His Majesty's Seventeenth Regiment of Dragoons, and came to this province with the first embarkation from New York previous to the evacuation". Lots in Prince William, York County, were granted to them by Order in Council, dated August 28, 1786.

While in Saint John, Samuel and Benjamin Rix lived with their brother-in-law, John Alloway, who had married their sister, Anne, in New York in 1783. He was then a sergeant in the Seventeenth Regiment of Dragoons, later he became a quartermaster in the King's American Dragoons. He, too, received a grant of land in Prince William. All three are listed with the New Brunswick Loyalists — Samuel's regiment is shown as the 70th Dragoons, and Benjamin's as Barrackmaster-General's Department.

John Alloway, Samuel and Benjamin Rix, and two former soldiers of the King's American Dragoons, formed a partnership and erected saw mills on their grants in Prince William. The venture was a failure, and in 1789 by Order in Council, the lands were declared escheated and were re-granted. This is the last reference to Samuel Birch Rix in New Brunswick.

Samuel arrived on the Island of Saint John c. 1790. He married Lydia Wright, c. 1793, daughter of William Wright, and they settled at North Bedeque. He purchased two hundred acres of land located near the future site of the Presbyterian Church; and, having made the last payment of sixty pounds, received the deed in 1808.

Samuel Rix was born c. 1762, and died at North Bedeque in 1848. His wife, Lydia Wright, was born at Westchester County, New York, c. 1773, and died in 1852 (probably at Lot 7 where some of the Rix family had moved). Their place of burial is unknown. They had twelve children, all mentioned in their father's will.

This will, dated March 6, 1848 and probated on April 14, 1848, left the farm to his sons, John and George, to take effect after the death of their mother. However, the farm was sold on October 1, 1850, and the deed was signed by Lydia Rix, John and Margaret Rix, and George Rix. The family then moved to Lot 7 where John had purchased land at Cape Wolfe, the deed to this land was dated October 2, 1850.

Samuel Rix took an active part in military affairs, since militia duty in the late 1700's and early 1800's was compulsory for every able-bodied man between the ages of sixteen and sixty. In an extract of a Militia General

Order, dated April 6, 1820, he was listed as a captain commanding a company of the Second Battalion. His muzzle-loading, single-barrel gun, with the initials "SR" cut in the wooden stock, is now in the possession of his great-great grandson, Burton Rix of Miminegash. Hello Anne

Some years ago I had a tree from Mr Clifford Bilkey, then aged 88 yrs, from which I am able to identify the Thomas and Margaret. They are

Thomas Bosanko and Margaret Rogers who married in Sithney 15 Dec 1810. His tree gave ten children of which William was the fifth brn 1819. He in fact married twice - 1st Loveday Strange 13 Nov 1843 and 2nd Mary Ann Ivy Richards 26 Dec 1846. The tree does not give Johanna, but by the marriage details of Johanna that you give would seem to be the "Joey" born 19 Aug 1821.
Henry is given as Henry Pascoe and the 10th child born on this tree gives James 26 Sep 1830.
The fourth child of this marriage was a Thomas born 1816 who married Susan Polkinghorne 7 Oct 1838 from whom Clifford Bilkey eventually descends. If you would like a copy of the tree I will try and scan one for you. I will say that it is rather shakily written in parts for the later years (mainly 1860's onward), but I could re-write them for you if you wish.

Hi Fayth,

Sorry I haven't replyed sooner but its getting to that very busy time of year.

I am 99.9% sure that I'am related to Roberta Peeples. We appear to have the same gt gt gt grandparents Samuel RICHARDS and Martha IVEY. She through their son John b: abt 1837 and mine through their son Thomas RICHARDS chr: 05 Apr 1818. Thomas RICHARDS married Joanna BOSANKO 09 Feb 1845 in Sithney Cornwall.
Joanna appears to be the sister of William BOSANKO who married Samuel and Martha's dautghter Mary Ann Ivey RICHARDS ch:07 Oct 1821.

chest region), clavicular head of the pectoralis major (upper chest region), anterior deltoid, long head of the triceps and latissimus dorsi. Here's what the researchers found:

Upper pec region: Statistically significant greater degree of stimulation was seen in the close grip over the wide grip and in the incline over the decline position. In addition, the decline, horizontal and incline positions showed greater stimulation in the pecs over the vertical position.

Lower-pec region: This area showed significantly greater degrees of stimulation in the wide-grip horizontal press than the decline and incline wide-grip positions. Further, the wide-grip incline position recorded significantly greater muscle activity than the narrow-grip incline.

Anterior deltoid: As the incline increased, so did this muscle's activation, particularly with a wide grip. In addition, the muscle was significantly more active in the narrow-grip vertical position than in the decline position. With a wide grip, both the incline and vertical positions created significantly greater delt stimulation than the horizontal and decline positions.

Triceps long head: The narrow grip recruited this muscle significantly more than the wide grip, and the horizontal and decline positions created significantly greater muscle stimulation than the incline and vertical positions.

Lats: The activity was so minimal, it doesn't warrant discussion.

Reading Between the Lines

Let's take it a step further and see how these studies compare, and what else we can learn. Well, the only comparison we're really left with is between the EMG activity of the upper- and lower-pec areas during the decline and incline press. Studies 2 and 3 agree that the lower pecs contract much differently in decline and incline presses. Barnett observed, however, that a significant increase in the upper pec's EMG activity occurred during the narrow-grip incline press when compared to the decline press, though Glass and Armstrong reported no such difference.

As often occurs in research, scientists report seemingly conflicting findings for the same thing. Yet a good explanation usually exists. The explanation here could be that the Glass and Armstrong study didn't differentiate between a narrow grip and wide grip. We should also consider electrode placement over the muscle as a critical factor in interpreting and comparing the data. The upper clavicular electrode used in Barnett's study was placed slightly higher on the pecs compared to the electrode placement used by Glass and Armstrong. In addition, the latter study saw a trend for increased upper-pec EMG activity during the incline as compared to the decline, but it wasn't statistically significant.

Now, consider that these studies looked at a dynamic movement with a moving bar where a time factor is associated with each rep. Because even a fraction of a second in speed between one rep to the next affects EMG signal interpretation, EMG signals would have to be somehow standardized for the two studies. Statisticians call this the root mean square. Because neither study utilized this method for standardizing EMG signals, though, an exact comparison isn't possible. Also, filtering of the data to remove electronic interference as performed by Barnett may have affected the amplitude of the EMG signals, thus prohibiting a direct comparison of the data.

TAKING IT TO THE GYM

So, have you had enough science talk to last you a lifetime? We promised you training pointers, but be aware that you can't necessarily expect huge regional changes in muscle size according to the angles you use. Yet something different clearly goes on in the muscle depending on how you train. So give the following tips a shot and see if any of them make a difference in your training.

- Your best bet in terms of pec training, regardless of region, would be the standard flat-bench press with a wide grip.
- To slightly emphasize the upper-pec region: Do horizontal or low incline presses, but try using a shoulder-width grip.
- To slightly emphasize the lower-pec region: The standard flat-bench press seems to do just fine here, but keep in mind that a wide grip may activate these fibers to a slightly greater extent than a narrow grip.
- To hit the anterior delts: The vertical or military press remains your best bet.
- To hit the triceps long head: No myth here – you still need to use a horizontal bench and a narrower grip.
- To hit the lats: All the talk about how your lats are involved in the bench press seems to be bunk. Do pulldowns, chins and rowing movements to stimulate this muscle group.
- To hit the biceps: Some lifters believe that strong bi's help a big bench; that seems to be bunk, too. Do curls for huge arms, not a huge bench press.
- Best grip: Try a grip width that roughly corresponds to two times your shoulder width. Lie on the floor while grasping a barbell, your upper arms touching the floor at 90 degrees to your torso and your forearms extended at 90 degrees to the ground. This width is approximately what produces the greatest muscle activity of the prime movers in the bench press.

One thing's for sure: EMG is a useful and practical way to learn about how much a muscle contracts. In that sense, we can hang our hat on the findings. Yet comparing the data from one study to the next isn't as simple as it may appear. M&F

Exercise physiologist Jeff S. Volek, MS, RD, CSCS, has competed successfully in powerlifting and is completing his doctorate at Pennsylvania State University in College Park. His major research centers around the influence of various diet and nutritional supplement combinations on exercise performance. William M. Sloboda's Penn State doctorate research focuses on EMG, wavelet analysis and muscle-fiber recruitment. He's a biomechanist and has also worked as an engineer at the NASA Lewis Research Center.

father of Mary James who married Thomas Bosanko

I was born on December the 10th A.D. 1822 at Lower Prospidnick, a small village in the parish of Sithney Cornwall England of comporatively poor but pious parent. After living at two other different places in that parish Holmenance & Prospidnick Downs it pleased God to take from us by death over dear father in the 52nd year of his age. His illness was long & severe. His end was peace. There were left a mother and eight childrens to lament his loss & to battle life as best we could.

None but myself could earn a living but with a few pounds left us & God's blessing we got through.

My brother Joseph died at Nancegollan in the 18th year of his age after a long affliction of King's Evils. ~~in the 18th year of his~~ age. His last words were that he was going to Jesus. His end was peace. During his life he had been often seen, a little cripple making the best of his way to the means of grace & grace soon

My mother was descended of very respectable & well to do parents who by unfortunate mine speculations became reduced.

My father's ancestry were said to be of what is termed ? family. Our parents feared God & we were not allowed to break the Sabbath or to indulge in vice as were some of our neighbours.

After I got out of my parents' control I for a while ran with others to do evil. Under the influence of God's Holy Spirit I got weary of sin & chose the way of peace. When about 18 years of age I thought of my ways and turned my feet to the testimonies of the Lord. Although under Methodist influence & my lot being cast where there was much of religious excitement & revival I could never feel like many others in this respect. I was the subject of milder influence & I soon realized the pardoning

I cannot, like many Cornish Methodists, speak of the exact time or place for such a change but I can speak of time and place when & where I had no doubt of my acceptance with God.

I remember when a very little lad walking with my good mother feeling happy and saying, - "Mother if I die now should I go to heaven"? That, I have often thought was my conversion but I fell into sin after that but could never often after enjoy sin like many of my companions.

Shortly after the death of my father I removed to Camborne to live, or lodge, coming home weekly & after some time the whole family removed thither.

My mother was a Camborne woman & loved the locality.

On Whit Monday 1847 my sister left for Australia & there got married to one - Joseph Sandow from Redruth

My second daughter Elizabeth Joanna born at Treve 4th Feby 1853 was baptised in Wesley Chapel Camborne by the Revd Joseph Watson. About this time my brother Henry left for U S America & I am left without a brother in England so changeable is this life.

After living at Treve Cottage between 4 & 5 years I have removed back to Pengegon.

I have made some attempts at preaching recently, for about a year past and I hope not without a call and not in vain. I am not aware of the precise date of the above but I know my first appointments to preach were early in 1853. I had made an attempt or two some time previous but did not feel happy in the work.

Methodist Episcopal Church

Records of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Vulcan indicate that the first services were probably held in 1882, in the original frame schoolhouse. Lay preachers were James Dawe and Tobiass Thomas Sr. The church was formally organized in 1885, with the Reverend Alex S. Fair, and services continued to be held in the schoolhouse. When the new and larger grade school was completed in that year, the Penn Iron Mining Company, which had built the original school presented the older building to the congregation. The new church in the old building was formally dedicated on May 23, 1886. By the fall of 1886, the Norway Current was able to comment that "The choir of the Vulcan M.E. Church is earning for itself an enviable reputation. The instrumental parts consist of an organ and cornet, and the vocal is well known to be far above average."

In 1889 a new wing was added on the north with chancel and choir loft. The right wing was added to the building in about 1907 or 1908, and the left wing in 1915 or 1916.

Through the years, the names of J.H. Nicholls and Digory Harfoot were added to the list of local preachers, while the minister's roll following Mr. Fair, included Timothy Edwards, F. Strong, E. W. Frazee, R. L. Hewson, R. E. Miller, Albert E. Hill, E. H. Scott, E. Stephens, W. J. Harper, Wm. P. Ainsworth, A. Nelson, John A. Hughes, J. H. Mappleback, John Bosanko, A. P. Rickard, Alvin Doten, H. E. Smith, Charles F. Wolfe, Wm. H. Hughes, J. W. Greenwood, John J. Strike, Howard F. Snell, Percy Lomass, C. M. Schuckman, Reginald Becker, Ralph Guilliat, Haybert Woodall, John Grenfell, Albert Terwilleger and Helen L. Royce.

The Reverend Pickard, who had not obtained a high school diploma earlier, attended high school in Vulcan at the same time that Ernest and Cecil Alford were in school.

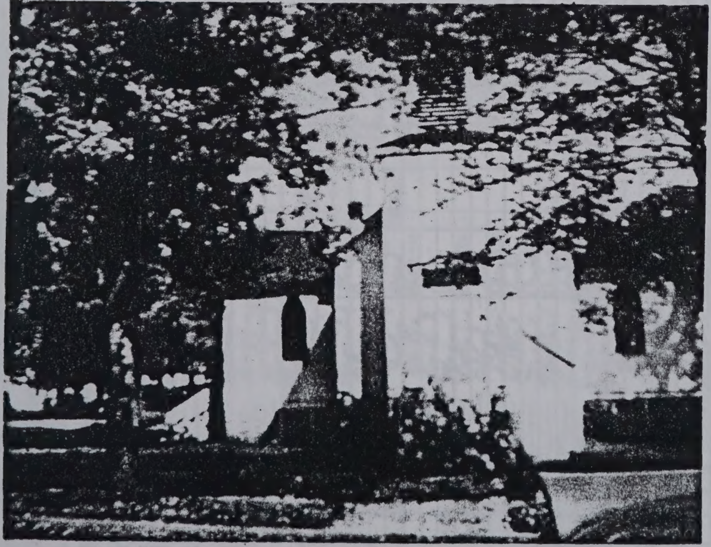
Funds for improvements to the church were frequently raised through "socials". The files of the Norway Current mention a clothespin social, a home talent concert, a necktie social and a peach social. Most of these events were held in Whitehead's Hall.

The young people, members of the Epworth League, held lawn socials lighted by Japanese lanterns on the church grounds. For one of these events, The Current commented, in a column called Vulcan Mites, "Tonight for one night only, at the M.E. Church, strawberries and 'I-scream'. "Don't forget, young man, to take your best girl, for ice cream has a wonderful way of stimulating the affections."

Prior to 1900, a parsonage was built on Central Boulevard, and occupied by most of the ministers who served in Vulcan. This house was later remodeled by Mr. & Mrs. Ralph LaPorte, and is still occupied by them.

The church was originally a part of the Norway Charge, but in 1902 the churches in Vulcan and Loretto were made a separate charge, with the Reverend R. E. Miller appointed as pastor. At some time prior to 1941 the Loretto church closed, and Vulcan returned to the Norway Circuit. In 1953, the Vulcan church became associated with the First Church, Iron Mountain, and in 1957 the Vulcan Church became a part of the Hermansville Charge.

In 1964, the Vulcan congregation was combined with that of Grace United Methodist Church in Norway, and the property in Vulcan sold. The church building was demolished in 1963. With it's wrecking, the first schoolhouse on the Menominee Range and one of the earliest protestant churches in the area disappeared.



Methodist Episcopal Church, which stood at the northeast corner of Main and Market Streets before it was destroyed in 1963. The building was originally the first frame schoolhouse on the Menominee Range, built in 1879.

A SHORT BIOGRAPHY OF JOHN HENRY BOSANKO

Written by Blanche B. Carter,
Niece of John Henry Bosanko

At the extreme southwestern corner of England where the ocean laps over the rugged coast line and the picturesque towns, villages and small rural areas lie back from the sea in a succession of rolling countryside, there lived in a sheltered little country community known as Prospidnic, Sithney, Cornwall, England a family known by the name of Thomas Bosanko and his wife, Mary James Bosanko. On October 15, 1873 a son was born to this couple, and the name given to this son was John Henry Bosanko. John was the second child and the oldest son of a large family, there being thirteen children born to this union. Three of these children died in infancy.

Thomas Bosanko, father of John Henry Bosanko, was a good man and a member of the little church at Tregathenan. He was a local Preacher in the Helston Circuit of the United Methodist Free Churches. His mother, Mary, was a gentle, kind woman loved by all who knew her. The Bosanko home was one of note in the community. The visiting ministers were often entertained at their home.

Thomas Bosanko was in the produce business. Fresh butter and eggs were gathered from the farmers in a little horse-drawn cart and delivered throughout a large surrounding area.

When John was just a very small boy toddling around, he had a head of golden curls which his mother kept in ringlets. It was not unusual in those days for a small boy to have his hair left without being cut from two to four years of age. John was a very serious, studious boy. He started school at the age of five. He learned quickly and well the art of reading and writing, and he was exceptionally good in spelling. Books were his constant companion. As soon as John and his younger brother, Tom, were old enough, they helped their father in the produce business. The business was too large to be cared for entirely by the family, so his dad often hired some help. John, with his brother and the hired help, often took over a large portion of the responsibility, often traveling fifty to seventy-five miles in a day. A bicycle was one of the main sources of transportation.

Family prayer was practiced in their home, the whole family being active in church. Sunday was a day looked forward to and planned for. Preparations for Sunday were cared for on the Saturday--cooking and Sunday clothes were all made ready. Sunday the whole family attended church; and with the easily prepared dinner out of the way, Sunday afternoons were often spent in the parlor around the piano singing their favorite hymns. Family and friends often dropped in to visit and join in with the family singing.

When John Henry Bosanko was twelve years of age, he started a diary. He derived so much satisfaction from the writing of this diary that he continued in the writing of a daily diary throughout the rest of his life, and it is from his diaries that he later compiled these journals.

John progressed quickly in school, and now, at twelve years of age, he was studying Latin and French. He was also taking music lessons and could play the piano quite well. He was very fond of good music, and throughout his whole life one often found him seated at the piano playing his favorite hymns.

Early in life, John decided to become a teacher, and it was his belief that in order to be a good teacher he should have a wide knowledge of many subjects, so he studied hard and made remarkable strides in education. Chemistry was among his favorite subjects. He also had a deep and abiding love in the study of the scriptures. He was a faithful member of the Methodist Church and Sunday School. He preached his first sermon at the age of fifteen, and he later served as a minister of the Methodist faith. On the completion of his education, he obtained a position as teacher and taught at Helston Science School and Camborne School of Mines.

On December 26, 1905, John married Helan Jane Pascoe. Following a short honeymoon in London, they settled down in a very attractive home at 11 St. Michaels Terrace, Penzance, Cornwall, England. Here they lived for about seven years, and their two children, Edith Mary and Stanley, were born while they were at this residence. Surrounding this home was a beautiful garden filled with roses of every kind and color which Uncle John tended with loving tender care. Helan, his wife, was known as Nell or Nellie and was a very attractive, well educated young lady.

In 1914 the first World War broke out bringing with it a great unrest throughout the whole British Nation. In 1915 John H. Bosanko accepted a job with the British government in Monkappan, South India leaving his wife and small daughter and son in England. He served in this position for five years, comfortable modest home at 745 Paloma Avenue, Burlingame, close to San Francisco, California. Here he spent his remaining days.

Uncle John was a quiet kindly man, able to converse intelligently upon almost any subject. Whenever he wrote a letter to his brothers or sisters or friends, he invariably slipped a dollar or two into the envelope. He loved beauty as expressed in his attractive garden, and he enjoyed music. He lived an exemplary life which bespoke a love of God and fellow man.

On the evening of May 12, 1955, Uncle John sat at the piano and played some of his most favorite hymns, "Master the Tempest is Raging" being one of his most loved of all hymns. About 9:00 p.m. he retired to his bed, and his kind daughter-in-law, Edna, checked to see that he was comfortable only to find him in the early morning laying in the same position having left this world in what appeared to be a state of perfect peace. He was buried at Woodlawn Memorial Park Cemetery, Burlingame, California, Reverend Myron Herrell officiating.

returning to England in 1920. Jobs were scarce, but John accepted a position at the Experiment Camp at Poston, North Salisbury, England. Conditions in England at this time were very grave reaching a state of depression. Even though John had this job with the experimental camp, he was not really satisfied, so in 1926, having made the proper arrangements, he and his wife and son, Stanley, set sail for the United States of America. His daughter, Edith, stayed in England to complete her nurses training, joining with her parents two years later. Now in this new country, Uncle John, being unable to acquire a job in the field of teaching yet having served the greater part of his life as a lay preacher, was now accepted in the ministry and became the minister of the Methodist faith in the little town or parish of Gwinn, Michigan. He served as a minister here until 1934. Upon retiring from the ministry, he moved to San Francisco, his wife and son joining him some little time later.

Stanley, his son, married a young lady that he met in San Francisco and settled in the same apartment house next door to his folks at 1501 Larkin Street. Edith, a supervisor over a children's hospital in Philadelphia, is not married.

Uncle John and his wife were now enjoying a semi-retirement situation with Uncle John working part-time for the Goodwill c/o. On October 23, 1952, Nellie, his beloved wife, passed away in a San Francisco hospital following a short illness. Uncle John, now in his eightieth year with his health in poor condition, felt keenly the loss of his good wife. Shortly after the loss of his wife, he helped his son, Stanley, and daughter-in-law, Edna, to obtain a very

Cornishman in San Francisco Bereaved

The death has occurred at the Franklyn Hospital, San Francisco, of Mrs. Bosanko, wife of Mr. John Henry Bosanko, a native of Sithney, who for about six years was vice-principal of Penzance Science School in Morrab-road. Previously, Mr. Bosanko was a teacher of science at Helston, in which district he is well known. He was a local preacher, and was for some time a circuit steward of Parade-street, Methodist Church, Penzance. Mr. Bosanko has a sister residing at Mullion, and a nephew (Mr. John Lobb) at Porthleven. On leaving Penzance, Mr. Bosanko went to India, and later to America, where he became minister of a Methodist Church at Hudson Bay. Subsequently he went to San Francisco, in the employ of the Goodwill Company.

Mrs. Bosanko, a member of the First Methodist Church of San Francisco, had been ill for some 12 months. At the largely-attended funeral service last week, the Pastor spoke of her great work for the church. She leaves two children. Miss Edith Bosanko, principal of a Methodist Home in New York, and Mr. Stanley Bosanko, employed by a tea company in San Francisco. Mr. John Birch of "Lyonnesse," Newlyn, a former Mayor of Penzance, corresponds with Mr. Bosanko regularly.

Rev. J. H. Bosanko

My dear Brother Bosanko:

I have your letter of the 21st, for which I thank you. I will carry this letter with me to Mohawk when I go to hold the Fourth Quarterly Conference. I cannot give you the date when I shall be in Mohawk. It may be just prior to the Michigamme Institute, or it may be between Michigamme and the meeting of our Annual Conference. At any rate, I will grant your request to talk the matter over with those people.

You have given me quite full information. I would like one or two additional facts:

First -- How much per month did you receive for the ten months you served the ~~Norway~~ Mohawk charge?

Second -- What was the full total amount received by you in cash for your ten months' work?

Third -- Did parsonage rental figure in at all in the transaction? Did you and your family occupy the parsonage? If so, how long?

Fourth -- Did you find yourself happy in your relationship with the ~~Norway~~ Mohawk people? Did they appear to appreciate your ministry? Were you invited to return for the second year?

John H. Bosanko "India" Vol. 8 - letter in journal, slighty attached (p1)

Rev. J. R. Bosanko

My dear Brother Bosanko:

I have your letter of the 21st, for which I thank you. I will carry this letter with me to Nahma when I go to hold the church quarterly Conference. I cannot give you the date when I shall be in Nahma. It may be just prior to the [illegible] Institute, or it may be between [illegible] and the meeting of our Annual Conference. At any rate, I will press your request to talk the matter over with these people.

You have given me quite full information but I would like one or two additional facts:

First -- How much per month did you receive the ten months you served the Nahma charge?

Second -- What was the full total amount received by you in cash for your ten months' work?

Third -- Did parsonage rental figure in at all in the transaction? Did you and your family occupy the parsonage? If so, how long?

Fourth -- Did you find yourself happy in your relationship with the Nahma people? Did they seem to appreciate your ministry? Were you invited to return for the second year?

Fifth -- While serving the ~~Norway~~ mohawk people during those ten months, did you receive from Dr. Leonard or elsewhere any missionary money? If so, how much?

Usually, Brother Bosanko, I find our Methodist churches anxious to do the fair and square thing with a pastor. It is a rare thing that a pastor occupying a pulpit for a full Conference year ever goes away without his full salary. I can see how, in serving a church for a part of a year, a little dissatisfaction might arise which would make the people indifferent toward paying the full percentage of a year's salary as reckoned by the month.

However, justice is justice, and I promise you that I will at least inquire into this matter and learn the other side of the question directly from the people concerned.

I am glad to have your information regarding the conditions under which you served as teacher in the School of Mines.

Suggesting the need of patience, and thanking you for your full presentation of this matter, I am

Yours very sincerely,

F. L. LEONARD

February 28, 1928.

Rev. J. H. Bosanko,
Mohawk, Michigan.

Original in BYU Library Special Collections.

Dear Brother Bosanko:

Your letter reached me yesterday and has had careful reading and consideration.

Of comrse, this is a matter that you will have to settle for yourself, but I am willing to give you such council as I may be able. The facts seem to be about as follows: First, there is little chance of advancement in the Ministry for a man who is not a member of the Conference; the conference men are always considered first. Second, the means of support for supply men after retirement are neglegible. Third, a man should always consider his future; it is not only his right but his duty.

What I have in mind for you next year is your present work with the re-addition of Kearsarge. This, of course, is not a promise. *

* $ present pay 240

Everything considered, it is my judgement that you would be perfectly justified in applying for the post at the College if it promises better than supply appointments.

In case you should decide to apply, and should secure the place, I would be pleased to have you take care of your present work until conference, if it is satisfactory to your people, which I have no doubt it would be.

Cordially,

F. L. Leonard.

THE LATE MR J. G. PASCOE.

The interment of the late Mr. J. Gilbert Pasc[illegible] took place on Thursday last at Churchill Cem[illegible]tery, when a large gathering of friends, includin[illegible] many prominent local agriculturists, was pre[illegible]sent. This showed the respect and esteem which the late gentleman enjoyed during his life, and [illegible] was a tribute to the family of the deceased. Mr. Pascoe, who was 69 years of age, was a Cornis[illegible]man born and bred, and lived formerly at [illegible] Martins, in Cornwall. Some twenty years sin[illegible] he came to the Sarsden Home Farm, succeedin[illegible] a Mr. Parr. He soon won many friends by his kindly disposition, and though he never aspire[illegible] to public offices, he was overseer of the paris[illegible] for many years. He was a staunch Wesleyan, but his broad-minded and charitable disposit[illegible] always caused him to respect other views, an[illegible] when he could no longer drive to Chipping Norton or other places to his Sunday worship, he in[illegible]variably attended Sarsden church. In matters agricultural he [illegible] interest [illegible] of sheep [illegible] sons and three daughters, and his widow was supported by the presence of most of them at the funeral on Thursday. The funeral cortege included the widow a[illegible] her eldest son (Mr. Herbert Pascoe), Mr. Stanl[illegible] and the eldest daughter, Mrs. Bosanko and [illegible] Edith Pascoe, and besides the immediate relati[illegible] there were many other friends and gentlemen re[illegible]presenting various religious bodies and organiz[illegible]tions with which the deceased gentleman was con[illegible]nected. Among others present were Messrs. [illegible] Trewecke and W. A. Trewecke, Mr. J. M. [illegible] (representing Sarsden Estate), Mr. Watts, Mr. [illegible] Edginton, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Crudge, Mr. Ber[illegible]nard Crudge, Dr. O'Kelly, Mr. A. E. Mace, Mr. J. Jefferies, Mr. J. George, Mr. Woolcock, senr., and family, Mr. S. Trewecke, Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Davison, Mr. Trevethian, Mr. Burbidge, and many Chipping Norton friends. The Rector (Rev. E. J. F. Johnson) met the funeral procession at the church gates and conducted the service within the mortuary chapel. Then the Rev. W. T. Pullen, Wesleyan Minister at Chipping Norton, read the committal prayers at the graveside. Numerous and beautiful were the wreaths from many sorrowing friends. The coffin was of plain [illegible] with heavy brass furniture, and the whole of the arrangements were carried out by Messrs. Webb and Son, under the immediate supervision of Mr. K. Pearson. The village folk always held the late gentleman in high regard, and many were present to pay their respects to his memory. Among those present were Mr. Dick, Mr. Vine, Mr. Bushrod, Mr. Henry Williams and Mrs. Williams, Mr. Albert Edmonds, Miss Williams, Mrs. W. A. Trewecke and the Misses Trewecke, Miss Watts, and others. The grave was lined with moss and ivy.

Dear Kenneth

Thank You very much for sending the packet of info on BOSANKO name / family ancestry tree etc!

Unfortunately my Aunt Edna Mary Bosanko (72 yrs) died April 28, 1981. She was the person in the family who was most interested in the family tree etc. However my dad and (2) brothers remain and they are looking through all the papers to see what she has accumulated on the family tree. If something turns up I'll send you a copy.

In the meantime, I do know that Blanch Mary Carter is a 1st cousin to my dad, his brother and the former [illegible] Bosanko, Thomas Bosanko [illegible]) and my grandfather, [illegible] was the [illegible] brother.

Best Regards

My grandfather was born in Sithney and moved to the U.S. at age 17. He was a remarkable man who was the leading founder of the Methodist Church
(St. Paul's) in Highland Park Michigan, suburb of Detroit.

When Blanche Mary came to the U.S. from England she stayed at my grandfather's house en route to Utah. My grandfather tried to get her to reside in Detroit rather than go to Utah.

My Aunt Edna Mary has been to visit Blanche in Utah and for many years up to her death she maintained communication with Blanche & other relatives in England and Cornwall.

Again many thanks for sending this info.

Subject: Re: John Polkinghorne BOSANKO

Welcome to the list, Mike.

It looks like your Emily Jane BOSANKO born 4 Jan 1866, would be dgter of John Polkinghorne BOSANKO and his wife, Jane (or possibly a "first" wife- see census, below).

John Polkinghorne BOSANKO, son of Thomas BOSANKO & Susan POLKINGHORNE, was born in Sithney Parish & chr.30 May 1844 (Baptism Records, Wesleyan Methodist-Helston Circuit, Cornwall, England- John was listed as 2 weeks old.)

Thomas BOSANKO was born 30 Sept 1816, Prospidnick Hill, Sithney Parish & was son of Thomas BOSANKO & Margaret ROGERS.

Susan POLKINGHORNE was born about 1817 in Sithney Parish & was dgter of William POLKINGHORNE.

The 1880 Census (Family Search CD) shows the following:

Dwelling: Tregathenan
Census Place: Sithney, Cornwall, England
Source: FHL Film 1341557 PRO Ref RG11 Piece 2322 Folio 104

Caroline B. BOSANCO 4 F Wendron, Cornwall, England

John Polkinghorne BOSANKO was apparently away on a mining contract in 1880, but was listed as "deceased" by 1901 when dgter Caroline Braden BOSANKO got married. As there is a 9 year gap between Mary E. & Caroline B. in the Census, it's possible that Jane is actually a second wife.

Subject: Re: Some Cornish Strays in Somerset 1881 Census

Hello Kay & All,

Thank you for posting these Cornish Strays. I had not known where they had gone to:

> Rel: Son
> HENRY BOTANKS(?) M 34 M Lithney (Sithney?) Cornwall, England
> Rel: Visitor
> Occ: Butter & Egg Dealer (Producer)
> EMILY BOTANKS(?) M 30 F Lithney (Sithney?) Cornwall, England
> Rel: Visitor
> SUSIE BOTANKS(?) 3 F Bristol, Gloucester, England
> Rel: Visitor
> JANE PAINTER U 20 F Chacewater, Cornwall, England
> Rel: Servant
> Occ: Domestic Servant

This looks like Henry BOSANKO from the Thomas BOSANKO/Margaret ROGERS line:

Thomas BOSANKO m. Margaret ROGERS on 15 Dec 1810, Sithney Parish
Their 5th Child:
Thomas BOSANKO b.1816 Sithney Parish
m. Susan POLKINGHORNE on 4 Oct 1838, Sithney Parish
Their 6th Child:
Henry BOSANKO b.abt 1847 Sithney Parish
m. Emily JOHNS on 28 Dec 1867 Sithney Parish

They must have left Cornwall by 1871 as I have not found them in the 1871 On-line Census Index.

I suspect Henry & Emily had other children, but perhaps left them at home while they were visiting.

Thank you again for forwarding these "strays".

Best Wishes,
Roberta Richards Peeples

Smith Hall died at his place near the University Saturday, from consumption. The remains were embalmed by Mr. Trezise and shipped to the home of his friends in Morgantown, West Virginia.

Mrs. Leonard, formerly well known in this city as Miss Carrie Turner, arrived Sunday to visit Mrs. J. H. O'Brien. Mrs. Leonard is en route to her home in Stockton, Cala., after a visit with her mother, Mrs. Charles Turner of Durango.

Chris Rosenbaum was over from Lafayette today. Together with William Beamond, Mr. Rosenbaum has taken a three years lease on the Caledonia at Louisville. They are cleaning up work on the first vein and will shortly go for the fine coal body in the second stratum of coal.

James Bosanko of the Hawley Merchandise company of Central City, died in that place Sunday morning. The deceased came to this country at the same time as the late step-mother of J. G. Trezise, and will be buried in Boulder by the side of that lady. The remains will arrive Wednesday morning. Deceased was a member of the A. O. U. W. which order will conduct the ceremonies.

Dr. Charles Wolfer, who was over from Louisville today, says the new water works are being put in rapidly, work going on every week day and Sundays. On pay day last Saturday from $20,000 to $25,000 in cold cash dropped into the hands of the miners and was quickly distributed through the various avenues of trade. The celebration Saturday night and Sunday, it is learned from another source, was something unsteady to contemplate. Weisenborn's best flowed down the mains of the new water works.

Mr. Hawley, head of a large mercantile concern at Central City, accompanied the funeral party of friends of the late James Bosanko. Deceased was a faithful salesman of the concern. While here Mr. Hawley was the guest of his old friend Trezise.

The remains of the late James Bosanko arrived from Central City on the morning train and were met at the depot by a detachment of Centennial State Lodge A. O. U. W. The family and friends of the deceased were placed in carriages and the line formed for the cemetery, where fitting exercises were conducted by Master Workman Patterson and Past Master John W. Day. A prayer by Rev. R. A. Chase closed the exercises. The grave had been prettily trimmed with evergreens and flowers by orders of Mr. Trezise.

Schizophrenia–In relatively mild conditions, as seen in private psychiatric practice or in outpatient clinics, dosage is 5 or 10 mg 3 or 4 times daily.

In moderate to severe conditions, for hospitalized or adequately supervised patients, usual starting dosage is 10 mg 3 or 4 times daily. Increase dosage gradually until symptoms are controlled or side effects become bothersome. When dosage is increased by small increments every 2 or 3 days, side effects either do not occur or are easily controlled. Some patients respond satisfactorily on 50 to 75 mg daily.

In more severe disturbances, optimum dosage is usually 100 to 150 mg daily.

I.M. Dosage: For immediate control of adult schizophrenic patients with severe symptomatology, inject an initial dose of 10 to 20 mg (2 to 4 mL) deeply into the upper outer quadrant of the buttock. Many patients respond shortly after the first injection. If necessary, however, repeat the initial dose every 2 to 4 hours (or, in resistant cases, every hour) to gain control of the patient. More than three or four doses are seldom necessary. After control is achieved, switch patient to an oral form of the drug at the same dosage level or higher. If, in rare cases, parenteral therapy is needed for a prolonged period, give 10 to 20 mg (2 to 4 mL) every 4 to 6 hours. Pain and irritation at the site of injection have seldom occurred.

Subcutaneous administration is not advisable because of local irritation.

DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION–CHILDREN

Do not use in pediatric surgery.

Children seem more prone to develop extrapyramidal reactions, even on moderate doses. Therefore, use lowest effective dosage. Tell parents not to exceed prescribed dosage, since the possibility of adverse reactions increases as dosage rises.

Occasionally the patient may react to the drug with signs of restlessness and excitement; if this occurs, do not administer additional doses. Take particular precaution in administering the drug to children with acute illnesses or dehydration (see under Dystonias).

When writing a prescription for the $2^{1}/_{2}$ mg size suppository, write "$2^{1}/_{2}$," not "2.5"; this will help avoid confusion with the 25 mg adult size.

1. Severe Nausea and Vomiting in Children: Compazine (prochlorperazine) should not be used in pediatric patients under 20 pounds in weight or 2 years of age. It should not be used in conditions for which children's dosages have not been established. Dosage and frequency of administration should be adjusted according to the severity of the symptoms and the response of the patient. The duration of activity following intramuscular administration may last up to 12 hours. Subsequent doses may be given by the same route if necessary.

Oral or Rectal Dosage: More than 1 day's therapy is seldom necessary.

Weight	Usual Dosage	Not to Exceed
under 20 lbs not recommended
20 to 29 lbs	$2^{1}/_{2}$ mg 1 or 2 times a day	7.5 mg per day
30 to 39 lbs	$2^{1}/_{2}$ mg 2 or 3 times a day	10 mg per day
40 to 85 lbs	$2^{1}/_{2}$ mg 3 times a day or 5 mg 2 times a day	15 mg per day

I.M. Dosage: Calculate each dose on the basis of 0.06 mg of the drug per lb of body weight; give by deep I.M. injection. Control is usually obtained with one dose.

2. In Children with schizophrenia:

Oral or Rectal Dosage: For children 2 to 12 years, starting dosage is $2^{1}/_{2}$ mg 2 or 3 times daily. Do not give more than 10 mg the first day. Then increase dosage according to patient's response.

FOR AGES 2 to 5, total daily dosage usually does not exceed 20 mg.

FOR AGES 6 to 12, total daily dosage usually does not exceed 25 mg.

I.M. Dosage: For ages under 12, calculate each dose on the basis of 0.06 mg of Compazine (prochlorperazine) per lb of body weight; give by deep I.M. injection. Control is usually obtained with one dose. After control is achieved, switch the patient to an oral form of the drug at the same dosage level or higher.

(See also ADVERSE REACTIONS.)

SYMPTOMS–Primarily involvement of the extrapyramidal mechanism producing some of the dystonic reactions described above.

Symptoms of central nervous system depression to the point of somnolence or coma. Agitation and restlessness may also occur. Other possible manifestations include convulsions, EKG changes and cardiac arrhythmias, fever and autonomic reactions such as hypotension, dry mouth and ileus.

TREATMENT–It is important to determine other medications taken by the patient since multiple-dose therapy is common in overdosage situations. Treatment is essentially symptomatic and supportive. Early gastric lavage is helpful. Keep patient under observation and maintain an open airway, since involvement of the extrapyramidal mechanism may produce dysphagia and respiratory difficulty in severe overdosage. Do not attempt to induce emesis because a dystonic reaction of the head or neck may develop that could result in aspiration of vomitus. Extrapyramidal symptoms may be treated with anti-parkinsonism drugs, barbiturates or Benadryl. See prescribing information for these products. Care should be taken to avoid increasing respiratory depression.

If administration of a stimulant is desirable, amphetamine, dextroamphetamine or caffeine with sodium benzoate is recommended.

Stimulants that may cause convulsions (e.g., picrotoxin or pentylenetetrazol) should be avoided.

If hypotension occurs, the standard measures for managing circulatory shock should be initiated. If it is desirable to administer a vasoconstrictor, Levophed and Neo-Synephrine are most suitable. Other pressor agents, including epinephrine, are not recommended because phenothiazine derivatives may reverse the usual elevating action of these agents and cause a further lowering of blood pressure.

Limited experience indicates that phenothiazines are not dialyzable.

Special note on Spansule capsules–Since much of the Spansule capsule medication is coated for gradual release, therapy directed at reversing the effects of the ingested drug and at supporting the patient should be continued for as long as overdosage symptoms remain. Saline cathartics are useful for hastening evacuation of pellets that have not already released medication.

Because phenothiazines may interfere with thermoregulatory mechanisms, use with caution in persons who will be exposed to extreme heat.

Phenothiazines can diminish the effect of oral anticoagulants.

Phenothiazines can produce alpha-adrenergic blockade

Thiazide diuretics may accentuate the orthostatic hypotension that may occur with phenothiazines

Antihypertensive effects of guanethidine and related compounds may be counteracted when phenothiazines are used concomitantly.

Concomitant administration of propranolol with phenothiazines results in increased plasma levels of both drugs

Phenothiazines may lower the convulsive threshold; dosage adjustments of anticonvulsants may be necessary. Potentiation of anticonvulsant effects does not occur. However, it has been reported that phenothiazines may interfere with the metabolism of Dilantin®‡ and thus precipitate Dilantin toxicity.

The presence of phenothiazines may produce false-positive phenylketonuria (PKU) test results.

Long-Term Therapy: Given the likelihood that some patients exposed chronically to antipsychotics will develop tardive dyskinesia, it is advised that all patients in whom chronic use is contemplated be given, if possible, full information about this risk. The decision to inform patients and/or their guardians must obviously take into account the clinical circumstances and the competency of the patient to understand the information provided.

To lessen the likelihood of adverse reactions related to cumulative drug effect, patients with a history of long-term therapy with Compazine (prochlorperazine) and/or other antipsychotics should be evaluated periodically to decide whether the maintenance dosage could be lowered or drug therapy discontinued.

Children with acute illnesses (e.g., chickenpox, CNS infections, measles, gastroenteritis) or dehydration seem to be much more susceptible to neuromuscular reactions, particularly dystonias, than are adults. In such patients, the drug should be used only under close supervision.

Drugs which lower the seizure threshold, including phenothiazine derivatives, should not be used with Amipaque®§. As with other phenothiazine derivatives, Compazine (prochlorperazine) should be discontinued at least 48 hours before myelography, should not be resumed for at least 24 hours postprocedure, and should not be used for the control of nausea and vomiting occurring either prior to myelography with Amipaque, or postprocedure.

ADVERSE REACTIONS

Drowsiness, dizziness, amenorrhea, blurred vision, skin reactions and hypotension may occur. Neuroleptic Malignant Syndrome (NMS) has been reported in association with antipsychotic drugs (see WARNINGS).

Cholestatic jaundice has occurred. If fever with grippe-like symptoms occurs, appropriate liver studies should be conducted. If tests indicate an abnormality, stop treatment. There have been a few observations of fatty changes in the livers of patients who have died while receiving the drug. No causal relationship has been established.

Leukopenia and agranulocytosis have occurred. Warn patients to report the sudden appearance of sore throat or other signs of infection. If white blood cell and differential counts indicate leukocyte depression, stop treatment and start antibiotic and other suitable therapy.

Neuromuscular (Extrapyramidal) Reactions

These symptoms are seen in a significant number of hospitalized mental patients. They may be characterized by motor restlessness, be of the dystonic type, or they may resemble parkinsonism.

Depending on the severity of symptoms, dosage should be reduced or discontinued. If therapy is reinstituted, it should be at a lower dosage. Should these symptoms occur in children or pregnant patients, the drug should be stopped and not reinstituted. In most cases barbiturates by suitable route of administration will suffice. (Or, injectable Benadryl®‖ may be useful.) In more severe cases, the administration of an anti-parkinsonism agent, except levodopa (see PDR), usually produces rapid reversal of symptoms. Suitable supportive measures such as maintaining a clear airway and adequate hydration should be employed.

Motor Restlessness: Symptoms may include agitation or jitteriness and sometimes insomnia. These symptoms often disappear spontaneously. At times these symptoms may be similar to the original neurotic or psychotic symptoms. Dosage should not be increased until these side effects have subsided.

If these symptoms become too troublesome, they can usually be controlled by a reduction of dosage or change of drug. Treatment with anti-parkinsonian agents, benzodiazepines or propranolol may be helpful.

Dystonias: Symptoms may include: spasm of the neck muscles, sometimes progressing to torticollis; extensor rigidity of back muscles, sometimes progressing to opisthotonos; carpopedal spasm, trismus, swallowing difficulty, oculogyric crisis and protrusion of the tongue.

These usually subside within a few hours, and almost always within 24 to 48 hours, after the drug has been discontinued.

In mild cases, reassurance or a barbiturate is often sufficient. In moderate cases, barbiturates will usually bring rapid relief. In more severe adult cases, the administration of an anti-parkinsonism agent, except levodopa (see PDR), usually produces rapid reversal of symptoms. In children, reassurance and barbiturates will usually control symptoms. (Or, injectable Benadryl may be useful. Note: See Benadryl prescribing information for appropriate children's dosage.) If appropriate treatment with anti-parkinsonism agents or Benadryl fails to reverse the signs and symptoms, the diagnosis should be reevaluated.

Pseudo-parkinsonism: Symptoms may include: mask-like facies; drooling; tremors; pill-rolling motion; cogwheel rigidity; and shuffling gait. Reassurance and sedation are important. In most cases these symptoms are readily controlled when an anti-parkinsonism agent is administered concomitantly. Anti-parkinsonism agents should be used only when required. Generally, therapy of a few weeks to 2 or 3 months will suffice. After this time patients should be evaluated to determine their need for continued treatment. (Note: Levodopa has not been found effective in pseudo-parkinsonism.) Occasionally it is necessary to lower the dosage of Compazine (prochlorperazine) or to discontinue the drug.

Tardive Dyskinesia: As with all antipsychotic agents, tardive dyskinesia may appear in some patients on long-term therapy or may appear after drug therapy has been discontinued. The syndrome can also develop, although much less frequently, after relatively brief treatment periods at low doses. This syndrome appears in all age groups. Although its prevalence appears to be highest among elderly patients, especially elderly women, it is impossible to rely upon prevalence estimates to predict at the inception of antipsychotic treatment which patients are likely to develop the syndrome. The symptoms are persistent and in some patients appear to be irreversible. The syndrome is characterized by rhythmical involuntary movements of the tongue, face, mouth or jaw (e.g., protrusion of tongue, puffing of cheeks, puckering of mouth, chewing movements). Sometimes these may be accompanied by involuntary movements of extremities. In rare instances, these involuntary movements of the extremities are the only manifestations of tardive dyskinesia. A variant of tardive dyskinesia, tardive dystonia, has also been described.

There is no known effective treatment for tardive dyskinesia; anti-parkinsonism agents do not alleviate the symptoms of this syndrome. It is suggested that all antipsychotic agents be discontinued if these symptoms appear.

Should it be necessary to reinstitute treatment, or increase the dosage of the agent, or switch to a different antipsychotic agent, the syndrome may be masked.

It has been reported that fine vermicular movements of the tongue may be an early sign of the syndrome and if the medication is stopped at that time the syndrome may not develop.

Contact Dermatitis: Avoid getting the Injection solution on hands or clothing because of the possibility of contact dermatitis.

Adverse Reactions Reported with Compazine (prochlorperazine) or Other Phenothiazine Derivatives: Adverse reactions with different phenothiazines vary in type, frequency and mechanism of occurrence, i.e., some are dose-related, while others involve individual patient sensitivity. Some adverse reactions may be more likely to occur, or occur with greater intensity, in patients with special medical problems, e.g., patients with mitral insufficiency or pheochromocytoma have experienced severe hypotension following recommended doses of certain phenothiazines.

Not all of the following adverse reactions have been observed with every phenothiazine derivative, but they have been reported with 1 or more and should be borne in mind when drugs of this class are administered: extrapyramidal symptoms (opisthotonos, oculogyric crisis, hyperreflexia, dystonia, akathisia, dyskinesia, parkinsonism) some of which have lasted months and even years–particularly in elderly patients with previous brain damage; grand mal and petit mal convulsions, particularly in patients with EEG abnormalities or history of such disorders; altered cerebrospinal fluid proteins; cerebral edema; intensification and prolongation of the action of central nervous system depressants (opiates, analgesics, antihistamines, barbiturates, alcohol), atropine, heat, organophosphorus insecticides; autonomic reactions (dryness of mouth, nasal congestion, headache, nausea, constipation, obstipation, adynamic ileus, ejaculatory disorders/impotence, priapism, atonic colon, urinary retention, miosis and mydriasis); reactivation of psychotic processes, catatonic-like states; hypotension (sometimes fatal); cardiac arrest; blood dyscrasias (pancytopenia, thrombocytopenic purpura, leukopenia, agranulocytosis, eosinophilia, hemolytic anemia, aplastic anemia); liver damage (jaundice, biliary stasis); endocrine disturbances (hyperglycemia, hypoglycemia, glycosuria, lactation, galactorrhea, gynecomastia, menstrual irregularities, false-positive pregnancy tests); skin disorders (photosensitivity, itching, erythema, urticaria, eczema up to exfoliative dermatitis); other allergic reactions (asthma, laryngeal edema, angioneurotic edema, anaphylactoid reactions); peripheral edema; reversed epinephrine effect; hyperpyrexia; mild fever after large I.M. doses; increased appetite; increased weight; a systemic lupus erythematosus-like syndrome; pigmentary retinopathy; with prolonged administration of substantial doses, skin pigmentation, epithelial keratopathy, and lenticular and corneal deposits.

EKG changes–particularly nonspecific, usually reversible Q and T wave distortions–have been observed in some patients receiving phenothiazines.

Although phenothiazines cause neither psychic nor physical dependence, sudden discontinuance in long-term psychiatric patients may cause temporary symptoms, e.g., nausea and vomiting, dizziness, tremulousness.

Note: There have been occasional reports of sudden death in patients receiving phenothiazines. In some cases, the cause appeared to be cardiac arrest or asphyxia due to failure of the cough reflex.

DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION

Notes on Injection: Stability–This solution should be protected from light. This is a clear, colorless to pale yellow solution; a slight yellowish discoloration will not alter potency. If markedly discolored, solution should be discarded.

Compatibility–It is recommended that Compazine (prochlorperazine) Injection not be mixed with other agents in the syringe.

DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION–ADULTS

(For children's dosage and administration, see below.) Dosage should be increased more gradually in debilitated or emaciated patients.

Elderly Patients: In general, dosages in the lower range are sufficient for most elderly patients. Since they appear to be more susceptible to hypotension and neuromuscular reactions, such patients should be observed closely. Dosage should be tailored to the individual, response carefully monitored and dosage adjusted accordingly. Dosage should be increased more gradually in elderly patients.

1. To Control Severe Nausea and Vomiting: Adjust dosage to the response of the individual. Begin with the lowest recommended dosage.

Oral Dosage–Tablets: Usually one 5 mg or 10 mg tablet 3 or 4 times daily. Daily dosages above 40 mg should be used only in resistant cases.

Spansule* capsules: Initially, usually one 15 mg capsule on arising or one 10 mg capsule q12h. Daily doses above 40 mg should be used only in resistant cases.

Rectal Dosage: 25 mg twice daily.

I.M. Dosage: Initially 5 to 10 mg (1 to 2 mL) injected deeply into the upper outer quadrant of the buttock. If necessary, repeat every 3 or 4 hours. Total I.M. dosage should not exceed 40 mg per day.

I.V. Dosage: $2^{1}/_{2}$ to 10 mg ($^{1}/_{2}$ to 2 mL) by slow I.V. injection or infusion at a rate not to exceed 5 mg per minute. Compazine Injection may be administered either undiluted or diluted in isotonic solution. A single dose of the drug should not exceed 10 mg; total I.V. dosage should not exceed 40 mg per day. When administered I.V., do not use bolus injection. Hypotension is a possibility if the drug is given by I.V. injection or infusion.

Subcutaneous administration is not advisable because of local irritation.

2. Adult Surgery (for severe nausea and vomiting): Total parenteral dosage should not exceed 40 mg per day. Hypotension is a possibility if the drug is given by I.V. injection or infusion.

I.M. Dosage: 5 to 10 mg (1 to 2 mL) 1 to 2 hours before induction of anesthesia (repeat once in 30 minutes, if necessary), or to control acute symptoms during and after surgery (repeat once if necessary).

I.V. Dosage: 5 to 10 mg (1 to 2 mL) as a slow I.V. injection or infusion 15 to 30 minutes before induction of anesthesia, or to control acute symptoms during or after surgery. Repeat once if necessary. Compazine (prochlorperazine) may be administered either undiluted or diluted in isotonic solution, but a single dose of the drug should not exceed 10 mg. The rate of administration should not exceed 5 mg per minute. When administered I.V., do not use bolus injection.

3. In Adult Psychiatric Disorders: Adjust dosage to the response of the individual and according to the severity of the condition. Begin with the lowest recommended dose. Although response ordinarily is seen within a day or 2, longer treatment is usually required before maximal improvement is seen.

Oral Dosage: Non-Psychotic Anxiety–Usual dosage is 5 mg 3 or 4 times daily, by Spansule capsule, usually one 15 mg capsule on arising or one 10 mg capsule q12h. Do not administer in doses of more than 20 mg per day or for longer than 12 weeks.

PRESCRIBING INFORMATION

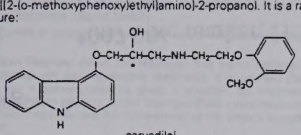
carvedilol Tablets

DESCRIPTION

Carvedilol is a nonselective β-adrenergic blocking agent with α_1-blocking activity. It is (±)-1-(Carbazol-4-yloxy)-3-[[2-(o-methoxyphenoxy)ethyl]amino]-2-propanol. It is a racemic mixture with the following structure:



carvedilol

Tablets for Oral Administration:

Coreg (carvedilol) is a white, oval, film-coated tablet containing 3.125 mg, 6.25 mg, 12.5 mg or 25 mg of carvedilol. The 6.25 mg, 12.5 mg and 25 mg tablets are Tiltab* tablets. Inactive ingredients consist of colloidal silicon dioxide, crospovidone, hydroxypropyl methylcellulose, lactose, magnesium stearate, polyethylene glycol, polysorbate 80, povidone, sucrose and titanium dioxide.

Carvedilol is a white to off-white powder with a molecular weight of 406.5 and a molecular formula of $C_{24}H_{26}N_2O_4$. It is freely soluble in dimethylsulfoxide; soluble in methylene chloride and methanol; sparingly soluble in 95% ethanol and isopropanol; slightly soluble in ethyl ether; and practically insoluble in water, gastric fluid (simulated, TS, pH 1.1) and intestinal fluid (simulated, TS without pancreatin, pH 7.5).

CLINICAL PHARMACOLOGY

Coreg is a racemic mixture in which nonselective β-adrenoreceptor blocking activity is present in the S(-) enantiomer and α-adrenergic blocking activity is present in both R(+) and S(-) enantiomers at equal potency. Coreg has no intrinsic sympathomimetic activity.

Pharmacokinetics

Coreg is rapidly and extensively absorbed following oral administration, with absolute bioavailability of approximately 25% to 35% due to a significant degree of first-pass metabolism. Following oral administration, the apparent mean terminal elimination half-life of carvedilol generally ranges from 7 to 10 hours. Plasma concentrations achieved are proportional to the oral dose administered. When administered with food, the rate of absorption is slowed, as evidenced by a delay in the time to reach peak plasma levels, with no significant difference in extent of bioavailability. Taking Coreg with food should minimize the risk of orthostatic hypotension.

Carvedilol is extensively metabolized. Following oral administration of radiolabelled carvedilol to healthy volunteers, carvedilol accounted for only about 7% of the total radioactivity in plasma as measured by area under the curve (AUC). Less than 2% of the dose was excreted unchanged in the urine. Carvedilol is metabolized primarily by aromatic ring oxidation and glucuronidation. The oxidative metabolites are further metabolized by conjugation via glucuronidation and sulfation. The metabolites of carvedilol are excreted primarily via the bile into the feces. Demethylation and hydroxylation at the phenol ring produce three active metabolites with β-receptor blocking activity. Based on preclinical studies, the 4'-hydroxyphenyl metabolite is approximately 13 times more potent than carvedilol for β-blockade.

Compared to carvedilol, the three active metabolites exhibit weak vasodilating activity. Plasma concentrations of the active metabolites are about one-tenth of those observed for carvedilol and have pharmacokinetics similar to the parent.

Carvedilol undergoes stereoselective first-pass metabolism with plasma levels of R(+)-carvedilol approximately 2 to 3 times higher than S(-)-carvedilol following oral administration in healthy subjects. The mean apparent terminal elimination half-lives for R(+)-carvedilol range from 5 to 9 hours compared with 7 to 11 hours for the S(-)-enantiomer.

The primary P450 enzymes responsible for the metabolism of both R(+) and S(-)-carvedilol in human liver microsomes were CYP2D6 and CYP2C9 and to a lesser extent CYP3A4, 2C19, 1A2, and 2E1. CYP2D6 is thought to be the major enzyme in the 4'- and 5'-hydroxylation of carvedilol, with a potential contribution from 3A4. CYP2C9 is thought to be of primary importance in the O-methylation pathway of S(-)-carvedilol.

Carvedilol is subject to the effects of genetic polymorphism with poor metabolizers of debrisoquin (a marker for cytochrome P450 2D6) exhibiting 2- to 3-fold higher plasma concentrations of R(+)-carvedilol compared to extensive metabolizers. In contrast, plasma levels of S(-)-carvedilol are increased only about 20% to 25% in poor metabolizers, indicating this enantiomer is metabolized to a lesser extent by cytochrome P450 2D6 than R(+)-carvedilol. The pharmacokinetics of carvedilol do not appear to be different in poor metabolizers of S-mephenytoin (patients deficient in cytochrome P450 2C19).

Carvedilol is more than 98% bound to plasma proteins, primarily with albumin. The plasma-protein binding is independent of concentration over the therapeutic range. Carvedilol is a basic, lipophilic compound with a steady-state volume of distribution of approximately 115 L, indicating substantial distribution into extravascular tissues. Plasma clearance ranges from 500 to 700 mL/min.

Congestive Heart Failure: Steady-state plasma concentrations of carvedilol and its enantiomers increased proportionally over the 6.25 to 50 mg dose range in patients with congestive heart failure. Compared to healthy subjects, congestive heart failure patients had increased mean AUC and C_{max} values for carvedilol and its enantiomers, with up to 50% to 100% higher values observed in 6 patients with NYHA class IV heart failure. The mean apparent terminal elimination half-life for carvedilol was similar to that observed in healthy subjects.

Pharmacokinetic Drug-Drug Interactions: Since carvedilol undergoes substantial oxidative metabolism, the metabolism and pharmacokinetics of carvedilol may be affected by induction or inhibition of cytochrome P450 enzymes.

Rifampin: In a pharmacokinetic study conducted in 8 healthy male subjects, rifampin (600 mg daily for 12 days) decreased the AUC and C_{max} of carvedilol by about 70%.

Cimetidine: In a pharmacokinetic study conducted in 10 healthy male subjects, cimetidine (1000 mg/day) increased the steady-state AUC of carvedilol by 30% with no change in C_{max}.

Glyburide: In 12 healthy subjects, combined administration of carvedilol (25 mg once daily) and a single dose of glyburide did not result in a clinically relevant pharmacokinetic interaction for either compound.

Hydrochlorothiazide: A single oral dose of carvedilol 25 mg did not alter the pharmacokinetics of a single oral dose of hydrochlorothiazide 25 mg in 12 patients with hypertension. Likewise, hydrochlorothiazide had no effect on the pharmacokinetics of carvedilol.

Digoxin: Following concomitant administration of carvedilol (25 mg once daily) and digoxin (0.25 mg once daily) for 14 days, steady-state AUC and trough concentrations of digoxin were increased by 14% and 16%, respectively, in 12 hypertensive patients.

Torsemide: In a study of 12 healthy subjects, combined oral administration of carvedilol 25 mg once daily and torsemide 5 mg once daily for 5 days did not result in any significant differences in their pharmacokinetics compared with administration of the drugs alone.

Warfarin: Carvedilol (12.5 mg twice daily) did not have an effect on the steady-state prothrombin time ratios and did not alter the pharmacokinetics of R(+)- and S(-)-warfarin following concomitant administration with warfarin in 9 healthy volunteers.

Special Populations

Elderly: Plasma levels of carvedilol average about 50% higher in the elderly compared to young subjects.

Hepatic Impairment: Compared to healthy subjects, patients with cirrhotic liver disease exhibit significantly higher concentrations of carvedilol (approximately 4- to 7-fold) following single-dose therapy (see WARNINGS, Hepatic Injury).

Renal Insufficiency: Although carvedilol is metabolized primarily by the liver, plasma concentrations of carvedilol have been reported to be increased in patients with renal impairment. Based on mean AUC data, approximately 40% to 50% higher plasma concentrations of carvedilol were observed in hypertensive patients with moderate to severe renal impairment compared to a control group of hypertensive patients with normal renal function. However, the ranges of AUC values were similar for both groups. Changes in mean peak plasma levels were less pronounced, approximately 12% to 26% higher in patients with impaired renal function.

Consistent with its high degree of plasma protein-binding, carvedilol does not appear to be cleared significantly by hemodialysis.

Pharmacodynamics and Clinical Trials

Congestive Heart Failure

Pharmacodynamics

The basis for the beneficial effects of Coreg (carvedilol) in congestive heart failure is not established.

Two placebo-controlled studies compared the acute hemodynamic effects of Coreg to baseline measurements in 59 and 49 patients with NYHA class II-IV heart failure receiving diuretics, ACE inhibitors, and digitalis. There were significant reductions in systemic blood pressure, pulmonary artery pressure, pulmonary capillary wedge pressure, and heart rate. Initial effects on cardiac output, stroke volume index, and systemic vascular resistance were small and variable.

These studies measured hemodynamic effects again at 12 to 14 weeks. Coreg significantly reduced systemic blood pressure, pulmonary artery pressure, right atrial pressure, systemic vascular resistance, and heart rate, while stroke volume index was increased.

Among 839 patients with NYHA class II-III heart failure treated for 26 to 52 weeks in 4 U.S. placebo-controlled trials, the average left ventricular ejection fraction (EF) measured by radionuclide ventriculography increased by 9 EF units (%) in Coreg patients and by 2 EF units in placebo patients at a target dose of 25-50 mg b.i.d. The effects of carvedilol on ejection fraction were related to dose. Doses of 6.25 mg b.i.d., 12.5 mg b.i.d. and 25 mg b.i.d. were associated with placebo-corrected increases in EF of 5 EF units, 6 EF units and 8 EF units, respectively; each of these effects were nominally statistically significant.

Hypertension

Pharmacodynamics

The mechanism by which β-blockade produces an antihypertensive effect has not been established.

β-adrenoreceptor blocking activity has been demonstrated in animal and human studies showing that carvedilol (1) reduces cardiac output in normal subjects; (2) reduces exercise- and/or isoproterenol-induced tachycardia and (3) reduces reflex orthostatic tachycardia. Significant β-adrenoreceptor blocking effect is usually seen within 1 hour of drug administration.

α_1-adrenoreceptor blocking activity has been demonstrated in human and animal studies, showing that carvedilol (1) attenuates the pressor effects of phenylephrine; (2) causes vasodilation and (3) reduces peripheral vascular resistance. These effects contribute to the reduction of blood pressure and usually are seen within 30 minutes of drug administration.

Due to the α_1-receptor blocking activity of carvedilol, blood pressure is lowered more in the standing than in the supine position, and symptoms of postural hypotension (1.8%), including rare instances of syncope, can occur. Following oral administration, when postural hypotension has occurred, it has been transient and is uncommon when Coreg is administered with food at the recommended starting dose and titration increments are closely followed (see DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION).

In hypertensive patients with normal renal function, therapeutic doses of Coreg decreased renal vascular resistance with no change in glomerular filtration rate or renal plasma flow. Changes in excretion of sodium, potassium, uric acid and phosphorus in hypertensive patients with normal renal function were similar after Coreg and placebo.

Coreg has little effect on plasma catecholamines, plasma aldosterone or electrolyte levels, but it does significantly reduce plasma renin activity when given for at least 4 weeks. It also increases levels of atrial natriuretic peptide.

CLINICAL TRIALS

Congestive Heart Failure

A total of 3,946 patients with mild to severe heart failure were evaluated in placebo–controlled studies of carvedilol.

In the largest study (COPERNICUS), 2,289 patients with heart failure at rest or with minimal exertion and left ventricular ejection fraction <25% (mean 20%), despite digitalis (66%), diuretics (99%), and ACE inhibitors (89%) were randomized to placebo or carvedilol. Carvedilol was titrated from a starting dose of 3.125 mg twice daily to the maximum tolerated dose or up to 25 mg twice daily over a minimum of 6 weeks. Most subjects achieved the target dose of 25 mg. The study was conducted in Eastern and Western Europe, the United States, Israel, and Canada. Similar numbers of subjects per group (about 100) withdrew during the titration period.

The primary end point of the trial was all-cause mortality, but cause-specific mortality and the risk of death or hospitalization (total, cardiovascular [CV] or congestive heart failure [CHF]) were also examined. The developing trial data were followed by a data monitoring committee, and mortality analyses were adjusted for these multiple looks. The trial was stopped after a median follow-up of 10 months because of an observed 35% reduction in mortality (from 19.7% per patient year on placebo to 12.8% on carvedilol, hazard ratio 0.65, 95% CI 0.52 – 0.81, p=0.0014, adjusted) (see Figure 1). The results of COPERNICUS are shown in Table 1.

Table 1. Results of COPERNICUS

End point	Placebo N=1,133	Carvedilol N=1,156	Hazard ratio (95% CI)	% Reduction	Nominal P value

Mortality + all hospitalization	507	425	0.76 (0.67 – 0.87)	24	0.00004
Mortality + CV hospitalization	395	314	0.73 (0.63 – 0.84)	27	0.00002

Schizophrenia–In relatively mild conditions, as seen in private psychiatric practice or in outpatient clinics, dosage is 5 or 10 mg 3 or 4 times daily.

In moderate to severe conditions, for hospitalized or adequately supervised patients, usual starting dosage is 10 mg 3 or 4 times daily. Increase dosage gradually until symptoms are controlled or side effects become bothersome. When dosage is increased by small increments every 2 or 3 days, side effects either do not occur or are easily controlled. Some patients respond satisfactorily on 50 to 75 mg daily.

In more severe disturbances, optimum dosage is usually 100 to 150 mg daily.

I.M. Dosage: For immediate control of adult schizophrenic patients with severe symptomatology, inject an initial dose of 10 to 20 mg (2 to 4 mL) deeply into the upper outer quadrant of the buttock. Many patients respond shortly after the first injection. If necessary, however, repeat the initial dose every 2 to 4 hours (or, in resistant cases, every hour) to gain control of the patient. More than three or four doses are seldom necessary. After control is achieved, switch patient to an oral form of the drug at the same dosage level or higher. If, in rare cases, parenteral therapy is needed for a prolonged period, give 10 to 20 mg (2 to 4 mL) every 4 to 6 hours. Pain and irritation at the site of injection have seldom occurred.

Subcutaneous administration is not advisable because of local irritation.

DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION–CHILDREN

Do not use in pediatric surgery.

Children seem more prone to develop extrapyramidal reactions, even on moderate doses. Therefore, use lowest effective dosage. Tell parents not to exceed prescribed dosage, since the possibility of adverse reactions increases as dosage rises.

Occasionally the patient may react to the drug with signs of restlessness and excitement; if this occurs, do not administer additional doses. Take particular precaution in administering the drug to children with acute illnesses or dehydration (see under Dystonias).

When writing a prescription for the $2^1/_2$ mg size suppository, write "$2^1/_2$," not "2.5"; this will help avoid confusion with the 25 mg adult size.

1. Severe Nausea and Vomiting in Children: Compazine (prochlorperazine) should not be used in pediatric patients under 20 pounds in weight or 2 years of age. It should not be used in conditions for which children's dosages have not been established. Dosage and frequency of administration should be adjusted according to the severity of the symptoms and the response of the patient. The duration of activity following intramuscular administration may last up to 12 hours. Subsequent doses may be given by the same route if necessary.

Oral or Rectal Dosage: More than 1 day's therapy is seldom necessary.

Weight	Usual Dosage	Not to Exceed
under 20 lbs not recommended
20 to 29 lbs	$2^1/_2$ mg 1 or 2 times a day	7.5 mg per day
30 to 39 lbs	$2^1/_2$ mg 2 or 3 times a day	10 mg per day
40 to 85 lbs	$2^1/_2$ mg 3 times a day or 5 mg 2 times a day	15 mg per day

I.M. Dosage: Calculate each dose on the basis of 0.06 mg of the drug per lb of body weight; give by deep I.M. injection. Control is usually obtained with one dose.

2. In Children with schizophrenia:

Oral or Rectal Dosage: For children 2 to 12 years, starting dosage is $2^1/_2$ mg 2 or 3 times daily. Do not give more than 10 mg the first day. Then increase dosage according to patient's response.

FOR AGES 2 to 5, total daily dosage usually does not exceed 20 mg.

FOR AGES 6 to 12, total daily dosage usually does not exceed 25 mg.

I.M. Dosage: For ages under 12, calculate each dose on the basis of 0.06 mg of Compazine (prochlorperazine) per lb of body weight; give by deep I.M. injection. Control is usually obtained with one dose. After control is achieved, switch the patient to an oral form of the drug at the same dosage level or higher.

SYMPTOMS–Primarily involvement of the extrapyramidal mechanism producing some of the dystonic reactions described above.

Symptoms of central nervous system depression to the point of somnolence or coma. Agitation and restlessness may also occur. Other possible manifestations include convulsions, EKG changes and cardiac arrhythmias, fever and autonomic reactions such as hypotension, dry mouth and ileus.

TREATMENT–It is important to determine other medications taken by the patient since multiple-dose therapy is common in overdosage situations. Treatment is essentially symptomatic and supportive. Early gastric lavage is helpful. Keep patient under observation and maintain an open airway, since involvement of the extrapyramidal mechanism may produce dysphagia and respiratory difficulty in severe overdosage. Do not attempt to induce emesis because a dystonic reaction of the head or neck may develop that could result in aspiration of vomitus. Extrapyramidal symptoms may be treated with anti-parkinsonism drugs, barbiturates or Benadryl. See prescribing information for these products. Care should be taken to avoid increasing respiratory depression.

If administration of a stimulant is desirable, amphetamine, dextroamphetamine or caffeine with sodium benzoate is recommended.

Stimulants that may cause convulsions (e.g., picrotoxin or pentylenetetrazol) should be avoided.

If hypotension occurs, the standard measures for managing circulatory shock should be initiated. If it is desirable to administer a vasoconstrictor, Levophed and Neo-Synephrine are most suitable. Other pressor agents, including epinephrine, are not recommended because phenothiazine derivatives may reverse the usual elevating action of these agents and cause a further lowering of blood pressure.

Limited experience indicates that phenothiazines are not dialyzable.

Special note on Spansule capsules–Since much of the Spansule capsule medication is coated for gradual release, therapy directed at reversing the effects of the ingested drug and at supporting the patient should be continued for as long as overdosage symptoms remain. Saline cathartics are useful for hastening evacuation of pellets that have not already released medication.

PRESCRIBING INFORMATION

brand of

prochlorperazine
antiemetic • tranquilizer

DESCRIPTION

Compazine (prochlorperazine) is a phenothiazine derivative, present in Compazine tablets and Spansule sustained release capsules as the maleate. Its chemical name is 2-chloro-10-[3-(4-methyl-1-piperazinyl)propyl]-10*H*-phenothiazine (Z)-2-butenedioate (1:2).

prochlorperazine maleate

Compazine vials and syrup contain prochlorperazine as the edisylate salt and Compazine suppositories contain prochlorperazine base. Empirical formulas (and molecular weights) are: prochlorperazine maleate—$C_{20}H_{24}ClN_3S \bullet 2C_4H_4O_4$ (606.10); prochlorperazine edisylate—$C_{20}H_{24}ClN_3S \bullet C_2H_6O_6S_2$ (564.14); and prochlorperazine base—$C_{20}H_{24}ClN_3S$ (373.95).

Tablets–Each round, yellow-green, coated tablet contains prochlorperazine maleate equivalent to prochlorperazine as follows: 5 mg imprinted SKF and C66; 10 mg imprinted SKF and C67.

5 mg and 10 mg Tablets–Inactive ingredients consist of cellulose, lactose, magnesium stearate, polyethylene glycol, sodium croscarmellose, titanium dioxide, D&C Yellow No. 10, FD&C Blue No. 2, FD&C Yellow No. 6, FD&C Red No. 40, iron oxide, starch, stearic acid and trace amounts of other inactive ingredients, including aluminum lake dyes.

Spansule® sustained release capsules–Each Compazine® Spansule capsule is so prepared that an initial dose is released promptly and the remaining medication is released gradually over a prolonged period. Food slows absorption of prochlorperazine and decreases C_{max} by 23% and AUC by 13%.

Each capsule, with black cap and natural body, contains prochlorperazine maleate equivalent to prochlorperazine. The 10 mg capsule is imprinted 10 mg and 3344 on the black cap and is imprinted 10 mg and SB on the natural body. The 15 mg capsule is imprinted 15 mg and 3346 on the black cap and is imprinted 15 mg and SB on the natural body. Inactive ingredients consist of ammonio methacrylate co-polymer, D&C Green No. 5, D&C Yellow No. 10, FD&C Blue No. 1, FD&C Blue No. 1 aluminum lake, FD&C Red No. 40, FD&C Yellow No. 6, gelatin, hydroxypropyl methylcellulose, propylene glycol, silicon dioxide, simethicone emulsion, sodium lauryl sulfate, sorbic acid, sugar spheres, talc, triethyl citrate, and trace amounts of other inactive ingredients. Vials, 2 mL (5 mg/mL) and 10 mL (5 mg/mL)–Each mL contains, in aqueous solution, 5 mg prochlorperazine as the edisylate, 5 mg sodium biphosphate, 12 mg sodium tartrate, 0.9 mg sodium saccharin and 0.75% benzyl alcohol as preservative. Suppositories–Each suppository contains $2\frac{1}{2}$ mg, 5 mg or 25 mg of prochlorperazine; with glycerin, glyceryl monopalmitate, glyceryl monostearate, hydrogenated cocoanut oil fatty acids and hydrogenated palm kernel oil fatty acids. Syrup–Each 5 mL (1 teaspoonful) of clear, yellow-orange, fruit-flavored liquid contains 5 mg of prochlorperazine as the edisylate. Inactive ingredients consist of FD&C Yellow No. 6, flavors, polyoxyethylene polyoxypropylene glycol, sodium benzoate, sodium citrate, sucrose and water.

INDICATIONS

For control of severe nausea and vomiting.

For the treatment of schizophrenia.

Compazine (prochlorperazine) is effective for the short-term treatment of generalized non-psychotic anxiety. However, Compazine is not the first drug to be used in therapy for most patients with non-psychotic anxiety, because certain risks associated with its use are not shared by common alternative treatments (e.g., benzodiazepines).

When used in the treatment of non-psychotic anxiety, Compazine should not be administered at doses of more than 20 mg per day or for longer than 12 weeks, because the use of Compazine at higher doses or for longer intervals may cause persistent tardive dyskinesia that may prove irreversible (see WARNINGS).

The effectiveness of Compazine as treatment for non-psychotic anxiety was established in 4-week clinical studies of outpatients with generalized anxiety disorder. This evidence does not predict that Compazine will be useful in patients with other non-psychotic conditions in which anxiety, or signs that mimic anxiety, are found (e.g., physical illness, organic mental conditions, agitated depression, character pathologies, etc.).

Compazine has not been shown effective in the management of behavioral complications in patients with mental retardation.

CONTRAINDICATIONS

Do not use in patients with known hypersensitivity to phenothiazines.

Do not use in comatose states or in the presence of large amounts of central nervous system depressants (alcohol, barbiturates, narcotics, etc.).

Do not use in pediatric surgery.

Do not use in pediatric patients under 2 years of age or under 20 lbs. Do not use in children for conditions for which dosage has not been established.

WARNINGS

The extrapyramidal symptoms which can occur secondary to Compazine (prochlorperazine) may be confused with the central nervous system signs of an undiagnosed primary disease responsible for the vomiting, e.g., Reye's syndrome or other encephalopathy. The use of Compazine (prochlorperazine) and other potential hepatotoxins should be avoided in children and adolescents whose signs and symptoms suggest Reye's syndrome.

Tardive Dyskinesia: Tardive dyskinesia, a syndrome consisting of potentially irreversible, involuntary, dyskinetic movements, may develop in patients treated with antipsychotic drugs. Although the prevalence of the syndrome appears to be highest among the elderly, especially elderly women, it is impossible to rely upon prevalence estimates to predict, at the inception of antipsychotic treatment, which patients are likely to develop the syndrome. Whether antipsychotic drug products differ in their potential to cause tardive dyskinesia is unknown.

Both the risk of developing the syndrome and the likelihood that it will become irreversible are believed to increase as the duration of treatment and the total cumulative dose of antipsychotic drugs administered to the patient increase. However, the syndrome can develop, although much less commonly, after relatively brief treatment periods at low doses.

There is no known treatment for established cases of tardive dyskinesia, although the syndrome may remit, partially or completely, if antipsychotic treatment is withdrawn. Antipsychotic treatment itself, however, may suppress (or partially suppress) the signs and symptoms of the syndrome and thereby may possibly mask the underlying disease process.

The effect that symptomatic suppression has upon the long-term course of the syndrome is unknown.

Given these considerations, antipsychotics should be prescribed in a manner that is most likely to minimize the occurrence of tardive dyskinesia. Chronic antipsychotic treatment should generally be reserved for patients who suffer from a chronic illness that, 1) is known to respond to antipsychotic drugs, and 2) for whom alternative, equally effective, but potentially less harmful treatments are not available or appropriate. In patients who do require chronic treatment, the smallest dose and the shortest duration of treatment producing a satisfactory clinical response should be sought. The need for continued treatment should be reassessed periodically.

If signs and symptoms of tardive dyskinesia appear in a patient on antipsychotics, drug discontinuation should be considered. However, some patients may require treatment despite the presence of the syndrome.

For further information about the description of tardive dyskinesia and its clinical detection, please refer to the sections on PRECAUTIONS and ADVERSE REACTIONS.

Neuroleptic Malignant Syndrome (NMS): A potentially fatal symptom complex sometimes referred to as Neuroleptic Malignant Syndrome (NMS) has been reported in association with antipsychotic drugs. Clinical manifestations of NMS are hyperpyrexia, muscle rigidity, altered mental status and evidence of autonomic instability (irregular pulse or blood pressure, tachycardia, diaphoresis and cardiac dysrhythmias).

The diagnostic evaluation of patients with this syndrome is complicated. In arriving at a diagnosis, it is important to identify cases where the clinical presentation includes both serious medical illness (e.g., pneumonia, systemic infection, etc.) and untreated or inadequately treated extrapyramidal signs and symptoms (EPS). Other important considerations in the differential diagnosis include central anticholinergic toxicity, heat stroke, drug fever and primary central nervous system (CNS) pathology.

The management of NMS should include 1) immediate discontinuation of antipsychotic drugs and other drugs not essential to concurrent therapy, 2) intensive symptomatic treatment and medical monitoring, and 3) treatment of any concomitant serious medical problems for which specific treatments are available. There is no general agreement about specific pharmacological treatment regimens for uncomplicated NMS.

If a patient requires antipsychotic drug treatment after recovery from NMS, the potential reintroduction of drug therapy should be carefully considered. The patient should be carefully monitored, since recurrences of NMS have been reported.

An encephalopathic syndrome (characterized by weakness, lethargy, fever, tremulousness and confusion, extrapyramidal symptoms, leukocytosis, elevated serum enzymes, BUN and FBS) has occurred in a few patients treated with lithium plus an antipsychotic. In some instances, the syndrome was followed by irreversible brain damage. Because of a possible causal relationship between these events and the concomitant administration of lithium and antipsychotics, patients receiving such combined therapy should be monitored closely for early evidence of neurologic toxicity and treatment discontinued promptly if such signs appear. This encephalopathic syndrome may be similar to or the same as neuroleptic malignant syndrome (NMS).

Patients with bone marrow depression or who have previously demonstrated a hypersensitivity reaction (e.g., blood dyscrasias, jaundice) with a phenothiazine should not receive any phenothiazine, including Compazine, unless in the judgment of the physician the potential benefits of treatment outweigh the possible hazards.

Compazine (prochlorperazine) may impair mental and/or physical abilities, especially during the first few days of therapy. Therefore, caution patients about activities requiring alertness (e.g., operating vehicles or machinery).

Phenothiazines may intensify or prolong the action of central nervous system depressants (e.g., alcohol, anesthetics, narcotics).

Usage in Pregnancy: Safety for the use of Compazine during pregnancy has not been established. Therefore, Compazine is not recommended for use in pregnant patients except in cases of severe nausea and vomiting that are so serious and intractable that, in the judgment of the physician, drug intervention is required and potential benefits outweigh possible hazards.

There have been reported instances of prolonged jaundice, extrapyramidal signs, hyperreflexia or hyporeflexia in newborn infants whose mothers received phenothiazines.

Nursing Mothers: There is evidence that phenothiazines are excreted in the breast milk of nursing mothers. Caution should be exercised when Compazine is administered to a nursing woman.

PRECAUTIONS

The antiemetic action of Compazine (prochlorperazine) may mask the signs and symptoms of overdosage of other drugs and may obscure the diagnosis and treatment of other conditions such as intestinal obstruction, brain tumor and Reye's syndrome (see WARNINGS).

When Compazine is used with cancer chemotherapeutic drugs, vomiting as a sign of the toxicity of these agents may be obscured by the antiemetic effect of Compazine.

Because hypotension may occur, large doses and parenteral administration should be used cautiously in patients with impaired cardiovascular systems. To minimize the occurrence of hypotension after injection, keep patient lying down and observe for at least ½ hour. If hypotension occurs after parenteral or oral dosing, place patient in head-low position with legs raised. If a vasoconstrictor is required, Levophed®* and Neo-Synephrine®† are suitable. Other pressor agents, including epinephrine, should not be used because they may cause a paradoxical further lowering of blood pressure.

Aspiration of vomitus has occurred in a few post-surgical patients who have received Compazine (prochlorperazine) as an antiemetic. Although no causal relationship has been established, this possibility should be borne in mind during surgical aftercare.

Deep sleep, from which patients can be aroused, and coma have been reported, usually with overdosage.

Antipsychotic drugs elevate prolactin levels; the elevation persists during chronic administration. Tissue culture experiments indicate that approximately one third of human breast cancers are prolactin-dependent in vitro, a factor of potential importance if the prescribing of these drugs is contemplated in a patient with a previously detected breast cancer. Although disturbances such as galactorrhea, amenorrhea, gynecomastia and impotence have been reported, the clinical significance of elevated serum prolactin levels is unknown for most patients. An increase in mammary neoplasms has been found in rodents after chronic administration of antipsychotic drugs. Neither clinical nor epidemiologic studies conducted to date, however, have shown an association between chronic administration of these drugs and mammary tumorigenesis; the available evidence is considered too limited to be conclusive at this time.

Chromosomal aberrations in spermatocytes and abnormal sperm have been demonstrated in rodents treated with certain antipsychotics.

As with all drugs which exert an anticholinergic effect, and/or cause mydriasis, prochlorperazine should be used with caution in patients with glaucoma.

potentiate blood-pressure- and heart-rate-lowering effects. When concomitant treatment with agents with β-blocking properties and clonidine is to be terminated, the β-blocking agent should be discontinued first. Clonidine therapy can then be discontinued several days later by gradually decreasing the dosage.

Cyclosporin: Modest increases in mean trough cyclosporin concentrations were observed following initiation of carvedilol treatment in 21 renal transplant patients suffering from chronic vascular rejection. In about 30% of patients, the dose of cyclosporin had to be reduced in order to maintain cyclosporin concentrations within the therapeutic range, while in the remainder no adjustment was needed. On the average for the group, the dose of cyclosporin was reduced about 20% in these patients. Due to wide interindividual variability in the dose adjustment required, it is recommended that cyclosporin concentrations be monitored closely after initiation of carvedilol therapy and that the dose of cyclosporin be adjusted as appropriate.

Digoxin: Digoxin concentrations are increased by about 15% when digoxin and carvedilol are administered concomitantly. Both digoxin and Coreg slow AV conduction. Therefore, increased monitoring of digoxin is recommended when initiating, adjusting or discontinuing Coreg.

Inducers and inhibitors of hepatic metabolism: Rifampin reduced plasma concentrations of carvedilol by about 70%. Cimetidine increased AUC by about 30% but caused no change in C_{max}.

Calcium channel blockers: Isolated cases of conduction disturbance (rarely with hemodynamic compromise) have been observed when Coreg is co-administered with diltiazem. As with other agents with β-blocking properties, if Coreg (carvedilol) is to be administered orally with calcium channel blockers of the verapamil or diltiazem type, it is recommended that ECG and blood pressure be monitored.

Insulin or oral hypoglycemics: Agents with β-blocking properties may enhance the blood-sugar-reducing effect of insulin and oral hypoglycemics. Therefore, in patients taking insulin or oral hypoglycemics, regular monitoring of blood glucose is recommended.

Carcinogenesis, Mutagenesis, Impairment of Fertility

In 2-year studies conducted in rats given carvedilol at doses up to 75 mg/kg/day (12 times the maximum recommended human dose [MRHD] when compared on a mg/m^2 basis) or in mice given up to 200 mg/kg/day (16 times the MRHD on a mg/m^2 basis), carvedilol had no carcinogenic effect.

Carvedilol was negative when tested in a battery of genotoxicity assays, including the Ames and the CHO/HGPRT assays for mutagenicity and the in vitro hamster micronucleus and in vivo human lymphocyte cell tests for clastogenicity.

At doses ≥200 mg/kg/day (≥32 times the MRHD as mg/m^2) carvedilol was toxic to adult rats (sedation, reduced weight gain) and was associated with a reduced number of successful matings, prolonged mating time, significantly fewer corpora lutea and implants per dam and complete resorption of 18% of the litters. The no-observed-effect dose level for overt toxicity and impairment of fertility was 60 mg/kg/day (10 times the MRHD as mg/m^2).

Pregnancy: Teratogenic Effects. Pregnancy Category C.

Studies performed in pregnant rats and rabbits given carvedilol revealed increased post-implantation loss in rats at doses of 300 mg/kg/day (50 times the MRHD as mg/m^2) and in rabbits at doses of 75 mg/kg/day (25 times the MRHD as mg/m^2). In the rats, there was also a decrease in fetal body weight at the maternally toxic dose of 300 mg/kg/day (50 times the MRHD as mg/m^2), which was accompanied by an elevation in the frequency of fetuses with delayed skeletal development (missing or stunted 13th rib). In rats the no-observed-effect level for developmental toxicity was 60 mg/kg/day (10 times the MRHD as mg/m^2); in rabbits it was 15 mg/kg/day (5 times the MRHD as mg/m^2). There are no adequate and well-controlled studies in pregnant women. Coreg should be used during pregnancy only if the potential benefit justifies the potential risk to the fetus.

Nursing Mothers

It is not known whether this drug is excreted in human milk. Studies in rats have shown that carvedilol and/or its metabolites (as well as other β-blockers) cross the placental barrier and are excreted in breast milk. There was increased mortality at one week post-partum in neonates from rats treated with 60 mg/kg/day (10 times the MRHD as mg/m^2) and above during the last trimester through day 22 of lactation. Because many drugs are excreted in human milk and because of the potential for serious adverse reactions in nursing infants from β-blockers, especially bradycardia, a decision should be made whether to discontinue nursing or to discontinue the drug, taking into account the importance of the drug to the mother. The effects of other α- and β-blocking agents have included perinatal and neonatal distress.

Pediatric Use

Safety and efficacy in patients younger than 18 years of age have not been established.

Geriatric Use

Of the 765 patients with congestive heart failure randomized to Coreg in U.S. clinical trials, 31% (235) were 65 years of age or older. Of the 1,156 patients randomized to Coreg in a long-term, placebo-controlled trial in severe heart failure, 47% (547) were 65 years of age or older. Of 3,025 patients receiving Coreg in congestive heart failure trials worldwide, 42% were 65 years of age or older. There were no notable differences in efficacy or the incidence of adverse events between older and younger patients.

Of the 2,065 hypertensive patients in U.S. clinical trials of efficacy or safety who were treated with Coreg (carvedilol), 21% (436) were 65 years of age or older. Of 3,722 patients receiving Coreg in hypertension clinical trials conducted worldwide, 24% were 65 years of age or older. There were no notable differences in efficacy or the incidence of adverse events between older and younger patients. With the exception of dizziness (incidence 8.8% in the elderly vs. 6% in younger patients), there were no events for which the incidence in the elderly exceeded that in the younger population by greater than 2.0%.

Similar results were observed in a postmarketing surveillance study of 3,328 Coreg patients, of whom approximately 20% were 65 years of age or older.

ADVERSE REACTIONS

Congestive Heart Failure

Coreg has been evaluated for safety in congestive heart failure in more than 3,000 patients worldwide of whom more than 2,100 participated in placebo-controlled clinical trials. Approximately 60% of the total treated population received Coreg for at least 6 months and 30% received Coreg for at least 12 months. The adverse experience profile of Coreg in patients with congestive heart failure was consistent with the pharmacology of the drug and the health status of the patients. In U.S. clinical trials in mild-to-moderate heart failure that compared Coreg in daily doses up to 100 mg (n=765) to placebo (n=437), 5.4% of Coreg patients discontinued treatment for adverse experiences vs. 8.0% of placebo patients. In a multinational clinical trial in severe heart failure (COPERNICUS) that compared Coreg in daily doses up to 50 mg (n=1,156) with placebo (n=1,133), 9.4% of Coreg patients discontinued treatment for adverse experiences vs. 11.2% of placebo patients.

Table 2 shows adverse events reported in patients with mild-to-moderate heart failure enrolled in U.S. placebo-controlled clinical trials. Shown are adverse events that occurred more frequently in drug-treated patients than placebo-treated patients with an incidence of >2% regardless of causality. Median study medication exposure was 6.33 months for both carvedilol and placebo patients.

Table 2. Adverse Events (% Occurrence and % Withdrawals) Occurring More Frequently with Coreg Than with Placebo in Patients with Mild-to-Moderate Heart Failure Enrolled in U.S. Heart Failure Trials (Incidence >2%, Regardless of Causality)

Effects were similar in patients with and without diabetes based on data from both COPERNICUS and the U.S. trials described below.

The effect on mortality was principally the result of a reduction in the rate of sudden death among patients without worsening heart failure.

Patients' global assessments showed significant improvement following treatment with carvedilol in COPERNICUS.

The protocol also specified that hospitalizations would be assessed. Fewer patients on Coreg than on placebo were hospitalized for any reason (198 vs. 268, $p=0.0001$), for cardiovascular reasons (246 vs. 314, $p=0.0003$), or for worsening heart failure (372 vs. 432, $p=0.0029$).

Coreg (carvedilol) had a consistent and beneficial effect on all-cause mortality as well as the combined end points of all-cause mortality plus hospitalization (total, CV or for heart failure) in the overall study population and in all subgroups examined, including men and women, elderly and non-elderly, blacks and non-blacks.

Carvedilol was also studied in five other multicenter, placebo-controlled studies.

Four U.S. multicenter, double-blind, placebo-controlled studies enrolled 1,094 patients (696 randomized to carvedilol) with NYHA class II-III heart failure and ejection fraction <0.35. The vast majority were on digitalis, diuretics, and an ACE inhibitor at study entry. Patients were assigned to the studies based upon exercise ability. An Australia-New Zealand double-blind, placebo-controlled study enrolled 415 patients (half randomized to carvedilol) with less severe heart failure. All protocols excluded patients expected to undergo cardiac transplantation during the 7.5 to 15 months of double-blind follow-up. All randomized patients had tolerated a 2-week course on carvedilol 6.25 mg b.i.d.

In each study, there was a primary end point, either progression of heart failure (one U.S. study) or exercise tolerance (two U.S. studies meeting enrollment goals and the Australia-New Zealand study). There were many secondary end points specified in these studies, including NYHA classification, patient and physician global assessments, and cardiovascular hospitalization. Death was not a specified end point in any study, but it was analyzed in all studies. Other analyses not prospectively planned included the sum of deaths and total cardiovascular hospitalizations. In situations where the primary end points of a trial do not show a significant benefit of treatment, assignment of significance values to the other results is complex, and such values need to be interpreted cautiously.

The results of the U.S. and Australia-New Zealand trials were as follows:

Slowing Progression of Heart Failure: One U.S. multicenter study (366 subjects) had as its primary end point the sum of cardiovascular mortality, cardiovascular hospitalization, and sustained increase in heart failure medications. Heart failure progression was reduced, during an average follow-up of 7 months, by 48% ($p=0.008$).

In the Australia-New Zealand study, death and total hospitalizations were reduced by about 25% over 18 to 24 months. In the three largest U.S. studies, death and total hospitalizations were reduced by 19%, 39% and 49%, nominally statistically significant in the last two studies. The Australia-New Zealand results were statistically borderline.

Functional Measures: None of the multicenter studies had NYHA classification as a primary end point, but all such studies had it as a secondary end point. There was at least a trend toward improvement in NYHA class in all studies. Exercise tolerance was the primary end point in 3 studies; in none was a statistically significant effect found.

Subjective Measures: Quality of life, as measured with a standard questionnaire (a primary end point in one study), was unaffected by carvedilol. However, patients' and investigators' global assessments showed significant improvement in most studies.

Mortality: Overall, in these four U.S. trials, mortality was reduced, nominally significantly so in 2 studies.

Hypertension

Coreg (carvedilol) was studied in two placebo-controlled trials that utilized twice-daily dosing, at total daily doses of 12.5 to 50 mg. In these and other studies, the starting dose did not exceed 12.5 mg. At 50 mg per day, Coreg reduced sitting trough (12-hour) blood pressure by about 9/5.5 mm Hg; at 25 mg/day the effect was about 7.5/3.5 mm Hg. Comparisons of trough to peak blood pressure showed a trough to peak ratio for blood pressure response of about 65%. Heart rate fell by about 7.5 beats per minute at 50 mg/day. In general, as is true for other β-blockers, responses were smaller in black than non-black patients. There were no age- or gender-related differences in response.

The peak antihypertensive effect occurred 1 to 2 hours after a dose. The dose-related blood pressure response was accompanied by a dose-related increase in adverse effects (see ADVERSE REACTIONS).

INDICATIONS AND USAGE

Congestive Heart Failure

Coreg is indicated for the treatment of mild to severe heart failure of ischemic or cardiomyopathic origin, usually in addition to diuretics, ACE inhibitor, and digitalis, to increase survival and, also, to reduce the risk of hospitalization.

Coreg may be used in patients unable to tolerate an ACE inhibitor and may also be used in patients who are or are not receiving digitalis, hydralazine or nitrate therapy.

Hypertension

Coreg (carvedilol) is also indicated for the management of essential hypertension. It can be used alone or in combination with other antihypertensive agents, especially thiazide-type diuretics (see PRECAUTIONS, Drug Interactions).

CONTRAINDICATIONS

Coreg is contraindicated in patients with bronchial asthma (two cases of death from status asthmaticus have been reported in patients receiving single doses of Coreg) or related bronchospastic conditions, second- or third-degree AV block, sick sinus syndrome or severe bradycardia (unless a permanent pacemaker is in place), or in patients with cardiogenic shock or who have decompensated heart failure requiring the use of intravenous inotropic therapy. Such patients should first be weaned from intravenous therapy before initiating Coreg.

Use of Coreg in patients with clinically manifest hepatic impairment is not recommended.

Coreg is contraindicated in patients with hypersensitivity to the drug.

WARNINGS

Hepatic Injury: Mild hepatocellular injury, confirmed by rechallenge, has occurred rarely with Coreg therapy in the treatment of hypertension. In controlled studies of hypertensive patients, the incidence of liver function abnormalities reported as adverse experiences was 1.1% (13 of 1,142 patients) in patients receiving Coreg and 0.9% (4 of 462 patients) in those receiving placebo. One patient receiving carvedilol in a placebo-controlled trial withdrew for abnormal hepatic function.

In controlled studies of primarily mild-to-moderate congestive heart failure, the incidence of liver function abnormalities reported as adverse experiences was 5.0% (38 of 765 patients) in patients receiving Coreg and 4.6% (20 of 437 patients) in those receiving placebo. Three patients receiving Coreg (0.4%) and two patients receiving placebo (0.5%) in placebo-controlled trials withdrew for abnormal hepatic function. Similarly, in a long-term, placebo-controlled trial in severe heart failure, there was no difference in the incidence of liver function abnormalities reported as adverse experiences between patients receiving Coreg and those receiving placebo. No patients receiving Coreg and one patient receiving placebo (0.09%) withdrew for hepatitis. In addition, patients treated with Coreg had lower values for hepatic transaminases than patients treated with placebo, possibly because Coreg-induced improvements in cardiac function led to less hepatic congestion and/or improved hepatic blood flow.

Hepatic injury has been reversible and has occurred after short- and/or long-term therapy with minimal clinical symptomatology. No deaths due to liver function abnormalities have been reported in association with the use of Coreg.

At the first symptom/sign of liver dysfunction (e.g., pruritus, dark urine, persistent anorexia, jaundice, right upper quadrant tenderness or unexplained "flu-like" symptoms), laboratory testing should be performed. If the patient has laboratory evidence of liver injury or jaundice, carvedilol should be stopped and not restarted.

Peripheral Vascular Disease: β-blockers can precipitate or aggravate symptoms of arterial insufficiency in patients with peripheral vascular disease. Caution should be exercised in such individuals.

Anesthesia and Major Surgery: If Coreg treatment is to be continued perioperatively, particular care should be taken when anesthetic agents which depress myocardial function, such as ether, cyclopropane and trichloroethylene, are used. See OVERDOSAGE for information on treatment of bradycardia and hypertension.

Diabetes and Hypoglycemia: In general, β-blockers may mask some of the manifestations of hypoglycemia, particularly tachycardia. Nonselective β-blockers may potentiate insulin-induced hypoglycemia and delay recovery of serum glucose levels. Patients subject to spontaneous hypoglycemia, or diabetic patients receiving insulin or oral hypoglycemic agents, should be cautioned about these possibilities. In congestive heart failure patients, there is a risk of worsening hyperglycemia (see PRECAUTIONS).

Thyrotoxicosis: β-adrenergic blockade may mask clinical signs of hyperthyroidism, such as tachycardia. Abrupt withdrawal of β-blockade may be followed by an exacerbation of the symptoms of hyperthyroidism or may precipitate thyroid storm.

PRECAUTIONS

General

Since Coreg (carvedilol) has β-blocking activity, it should not be discontinued abruptly, particularly in patients with ischemic heart disease. Instead, it should be discontinued over 1 to 2 weeks, whenever possible.

In clinical trials, Coreg caused bradycardia in about 2% of hypertensive patients and 9% of congestive heart failure patients. If pulse rate drops below 55 beats/min., the dosage should be reduced.

In clinical trials of primarily mild-to-moderate heart failure, hypotension and postural hypotension occurred in 9.7% and syncope in 3.4% of patients receiving Coreg compared to 3.6% and 2.5% of placebo patients, respectively. The risk for these events was highest during the first 30 days of dosing, corresponding to the up-titration period and was a cause for discontinuation of therapy in 0.7% of Coreg patients, compared to 0.4% of placebo patients. In a long-term, placebo-controlled trial in severe heart failure (COPERNICUS), hypotension and postural hypotension occurred in 15.1% and syncope in 2.9% of heart failure patients receiving Coreg compared to 8.7% and 2.3% of placebo patients, respectively. These events were a cause for discontinuation of therapy in 1.1% of Coreg patients, compared to 0.8% of placebo patients.

Postural hypotension occurred in 1.8% and syncope in 0.1% of hypertensive patients, primarily following the initial dose or at the time of dose increase and was a cause for discontinuation of therapy in 1% of patients.

To decrease the likelihood of syncope or excessive hypotension, treatment should be initiated with 3.125 mg b.i.d. for congestive heart failure patients and 6.25 mg b.i.d. for hypertensive patients. Dosage should then be increased slowly, according to recommendations in the DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION section, and the drug should be taken with food. During initiation of therapy, the patient should be cautioned to avoid situations such as driving or hazardous tasks, where injury could result should syncope occur.

Rarely, use of carvedilol in patients with congestive heart failure has resulted in deterioration of renal function. Patients at risk appear to be those with low blood pressure (systolic BP<100 mm Hg), ischemic heart disease and diffuse vascular disease, and/or underlying renal insufficiency. Renal function has returned to baseline when carvedilol was stopped. In patients with these risk factors it is recommended that renal function be monitored during up-titration of carvedilol and the drug discontinued or dosage reduced if worsening of renal function occurs.

Worsening heart failure or fluid retention may occur during up-titration of carvedilol. If such symptoms occur, diuretics should be increased and the carvedilol dose should not be advanced until clinical stability resumes (see DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION). Occasionally, it is necessary to lower the carvedilol dose or temporarily discontinue it. Such episodes do not preclude subsequent successful titration of, or a favorable response to, carvedilol. In a placebo-controlled trial of patients with severe heart failure, worsening heart failure during the first 3 months was reported to a similar degree with carvedilol and with placebo. When treatment was maintained beyond 3 months, worsening heart failure was reported less frequently in patients treated with carvedilol than with placebo. Worsening heart failure observed during long-term therapy is more likely to be related to the patients' underlying disease than to treatment with carvedilol.

In patients with pheochromocytoma, an α-blocking agent should be initiated prior to the use of any β-blocking agent. Although carvedilol has both α- and β-blocking pharmacologic activities, there has been no experience with its use in this condition. Therefore, caution should be taken in the administration of carvedilol to patients suspected of having pheochromocytoma.

Agents with non-selective β-blocking activity may provoke chest pain in patients with Prinzmetal's variant angina. There has been no clinical experience with carvedilol in these patients although the α-blocking activity may prevent such symptoms. However, caution should be taken in the administration of carvedilol to patients suspected of having Prinzmetal's variant angina.

In congestive heart failure patients with diabetes, carvedilol therapy may lead to worsening hyperglycemia, which responds to intensification of hypoglycemic therapy. It is recommended that blood glucose be monitored when carvedilol dosing is initiated, adjusted, or discontinued.

Risk of Anaphylactic Reaction

While taking β-blockers, patients with a history of severe anaphylactic reaction to a variety of allergens may be more reactive to repeated challenge, either accidental, diagnostic or therapeutic. Such patients may be unresponsive to the usual doses of epinephrine used to treat allergic reaction.

Nonallergic Bronchospasm (e.g., chronic bronchitis and emphysema)

Patients with bronchospastic disease should, in general, not receive β-blockers. Coreg may be used with caution, however, in patients who do not respond to, or cannot tolerate, other antihypertensive agents. It is prudent, if Coreg (carvedilol) is used, to use the smallest effective dose, so that inhibition of endogenous or exogenous β-agonists is minimized.

In clinical trials of patients with congestive heart failure, patients with bronchospastic disease were enrolled if they did not require oral or inhaled medication to treat their bronchospastic disease. In such patients, it is recommended that carvedilol be used with caution. The dosing recommendations should be followed closely and the dose should be lowered if any evidence of bronchospasm is observed during up-titration.

Information for Patients

Patients taking Coreg should be advised of the following:

- they should not interrupt or discontinue using Coreg without a physician's advice.
- congestive heart failure patients should consult their physician if they experience signs or symptoms of worsening heart failure such as weight gain or increasing shortness of breath.
- they may experience a drop in blood pressure when standing, resulting in dizziness and, rarely, fainting. Patients should sit or lie down when these symptoms of lowered blood pressure occur.
- if patients experience dizziness or fatigue, they should avoid driving or hazardous tasks.
- they should consult a physician if they experience dizziness or faintness, in case the dosage should be adjusted.
- they should take Coreg with food.
- diabetic patients should report any changes in blood sugar levels to their physician.
- contact lens wearers may experience decreased lacrimation.

Drug Interactions

(Also see CLINICAL PHARMACOLOGY, Pharmacokinetic Drug-Drug Interactions.)

Inhibitors of CYP2D6; poor metabolizers of debrisoquin: Interactions of carvedilol with strong inhibitors of CYP2D6 (such as quinidine, fluoxetine, paroxetine, and propafenone) have not been studied, but these drugs would be expected to increase blood levels of the R(+) enantiomer of carvedilol (see CLINICAL PHARMACOLOGY). Retrospective analysis of side effects in clinical trials showed that poor 2D6 metabolizers had a higher rate of dizziness during up-titration, presumably resulting from vasodilating effects of the higher concentrations of the α-blocking R(+) enantiomer.

Catecholamine-depleting agents: Patients taking both agents with β-blocking properties and a drug that can deplete catecholamines (e.g., reserpine and monoamine oxidase inhibitors) should be observed closely for signs of hypotension and/or severe bradycardia.

Clonidine: Concomitant administration of clonidine with agents with β-blocking properties may Paxil CR or the immediate-release formulation has not been evaluated or used to any appreciable extent in patients with a recent history of myocardial infarction or unstable heart disease. Patients with these diagnoses were excluded from clinical studies during premarket testing. Evaluation of electrocardiograms of 682 patients who received immediate-release paroxetine hydrochloride in double-blind, placebo-controlled trials, however, did not indicate that paroxetine is associated with the development of significant ECG abnormalities. Similarly, paroxetine hydrochloride does not cause any clinically important changes in heart rate or blood pressure.

Increased plasma concentrations of paroxetine occur in patients with severe renal impairment (creatinine clearance <30 mL/min.) or severe hepatic impairment. A lower starting dose should be used in such patients (see DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION).

Information for Patients

Physicians are advised to discuss the following issues with patients for whom they prescribe Paxil CR.

Paxil CR (paroxetine hydrochloride) tablets should not be chewed or crushed, and should be swallowed whole.

Interference with Cognitive and Motor Performance: Any psychoactive drug may impair judgment, thinking or motor skills. Although in controlled studies immediate-release paroxetine hydrochloride has not been shown to impair psychomotor performance, patients should be cautioned about operating hazardous machinery, including automobiles, until they are reasonably certain that Paxil CR therapy does not affect their ability to engage in such activities.

Completing Course of Therapy: While patients may notice improvement with Paxil CR therapy in 1 to 4 weeks, they should be advised to continue therapy as directed.

Concomitant Medications: Patients should be advised to inform their physician if they are taking, or plan to take, any prescription or over-the-counter drugs, since there is a potential for interactions.

Alcohol: Although immediate-release paroxetine hydrochloride has not been shown to increase the impairment of mental and motor skills caused by alcohol, patients should be advised to avoid alcohol while taking Paxil CR.

Pregnancy: Patients should be advised to notify their physician if they become pregnant or intend to become pregnant during therapy.

Nursing: Patients should be advised to notify their physician if they are breast-feeding an infant (see PRECAUTIONS–Nursing Mothers).

Laboratory Tests

There are no specific laboratory tests recommended.

Drug Interactions

Tryptophan: As with other serotonin reuptake inhibitors, an interaction between paroxetine and tryptophan may occur when they are co-administered. Adverse experiences, consisting primarily of headache, nausea, sweating and dizziness, have been reported when tryptophan was administered to patients taking immediate-release paroxetine. Consequently, concomitant use of Paxil CR with tryptophan is not recommended.

Monoamine Oxidase Inhibitors: See CONTRAINDICATIONS and WARNINGS.

Thioridazine: See CONTRAINDICATIONS and WARNINGS.

Warfarin: Preliminary data suggest that there may be a pharmacodynamic interaction (that causes an increased bleeding diathesis in the face of unaltered prothrombin time) between paroxetine and warfarin. Since there is little clinical experience, the concomitant administration of Paxil CR and warfarin should be undertaken with caution.

Sumatriptan: There have been rare postmarketing reports describing patients with weakness, hyperreflexia, and incoordination following the use of a selective serotonin reuptake inhibitor (SSRI) and sumatriptan. If concomitant treatment with sumatriptan and an SSRI (e.g., fluoxetine, fluvoxamine, paroxetine, sertraline) is clinically warranted, appropriate observation of the patient is advised.

Drugs Affecting Hepatic Metabolism: The metabolism and pharmacokinetics of paroxetine may be affected by the induction or inhibition of drug-metabolizing enzymes.

Cimetidine–Cimetidine inhibits many cytochrome P_{450} (oxidative) enzymes. In a study where immediate-release paroxetine (30 mg q.d.) was dosed orally for 4 weeks, steady-state plasma concentrations of paroxetine were increased by approximately 50% during co-administration with oral cimetidine (300 mg t.i.d.) for the final week. Therefore, when these drugs are administered concurrently, dosage adjustment of Paxil CR after the 25 mg starting dose should be guided by clinical effect. The effect of paroxetine on cimetidine's pharmacokinetics was not studied.

Phenobarbital–Phenobarbital induces many cytochrome P_{450} (oxidative) enzymes. When a single oral 30 mg dose of immediate-release paroxetine was administered at phenobarbital steady state (100 mg q.d. for 14 days), paroxetine AUC and $T_{1/2}$ were reduced (by an average of 25% and 38%, respectively) compared to paroxetine administered alone. The effect of paroxetine on phenobarbital pharmacokinetics was not studied. Since paroxetine exhibits nonlinear pharmacokinetics, the results of this study may not address the case where the two drugs are both being chronically dosed. No initial Paxil CR dosage adjustment is considered necessary when co-administered with phenobarbital; any subsequent adjustment should be guided by clinical effect.

Phenytoin–When a single oral 30 mg dose of immediate-release paroxetine was administered at phenytoin steady state (300 mg q.d. for 14 days), paroxetine AUC and $T_{1/2}$ were reduced (by an average of 50% and 35%, respectively) compared to immediate-release paroxetine administered alone. In a separate study, when a single oral 300 mg dose of phenytoin was administered at paroxetine steady state (30 mg q.d. for 14 days), phenytoin AUC was slightly reduced (12% on average) compared to phenytoin administered alone. Since both drugs exhibit nonlinear pharmacokinetics, the above studies may not address the case where the two drugs are both being chronically dosed. No initial dosage adjustments are considered necessary when Paxil CR is co-administered with phenytoin; any subsequent adjustments should be guided by clinical effect (see ADVERSE REACTIONS–Postmarketing Reports).

Drugs Metabolized by Cytochrome $P_{450}IID_6$: Many drugs, including most drugs effective in the treatment of major depressive disorder (paroxetine, other SSRIs, and many tricyclics), are metabolized by the cytochrome P_{450} isozyme $P_{450}IID_6$. Like other agents that are metabolized by $P_{450}IID_6$, paroxetine may significantly inhibit the activity of this isozyme. In most patients (>90%), this $P_{450}IID_6$ isozyme is saturated early during paroxetine dosing. In one study, daily dosing of immediate-release paroxetine (20 mg q.d.) under steady-state conditions increased single-dose desipramine (100 mg) C_{max}, AUC, and $T_{1/2}$ by an average of approximately two-, five-, and three-fold, respectively. Concomitant use of Paxil CR with other drugs metabolized by cytochrome $P_{450}IID_6$ has not been formally studied but may require lower doses than usually prescribed for either Paxil CR (paroxetine hydrochloride) or the other drug.

Therefore, co-administration of Paxil CR with other drugs that are metabolized by this isozyme, including certain drugs effective in the treatment of major depressive disorder (e.g., nortriptyline, amitriptyline, imipramine, desipramine and fluoxetine), phenothiazines and Type 1C antiarrhythmics (e.g., propafenone, flecainide and encainide), or that inhibit this enzyme (e.g., quinidine), should be approached with caution.

However, due to the risk of serious ventricular arrhythmias and sudden death potentially associated with elevated plasma levels of thioridazine, paroxetine and thioridazine should not be co-administered (see CONTRAINDICATIONS and WARNINGS).

At steady state, when the $P_{450}IID_6$ pathway is essentially saturated, paroxetine clearance is governed by alternative P_{450} isozymes which, unlike $P_{450}IID_6$, show no evidence of saturation (see PRECAUTIONS–Tricyclic Antidepressants).

Drugs Metabolized by Cytochrome $P_{450}IIIA_4$: An in vivo interaction study involving the co-administration under steady-state conditions of paroxetine and terfenadine, a substrate for $P_{450}IIIA_4$, revealed no effect of paroxetine on terfenadine pharmacokinetics. In addition, in vitro studies have shown ketoconazole, a potent inhibitor of $P_{450}IIIA_4$ activity, to be at least 100 times more potent than paroxetine as an inhibitor of the metabolism of several substrates for this enzyme, including terfenadine, astemizole, cisapride, triazolam, and cyclosporin. Based on the assumption that the relationship between paroxetine's in vitro K_i and its lack of effect on terfenadine's in vivo clearance predicts its effect on other $IIIA_4$ substrates, paroxetine's extent of inhibition of $IIIA_4$ activity is not likely to be of clinical significance.

Tricyclic Antidepressants (TCAs): Caution is indicated in the co-administration of tricyclic antidepressants (TCAs) with Paxil CR, because paroxetine may inhibit TCA metabolism. Plasma TCA concentrations may need to be monitored, and the dose of TCA may need to be reduced, if a TCA is co-administered with Paxil CR (see PRECAUTIONS—Drugs Metabolized by Cytochrome $P_{450}IID_6$).

Drugs Highly Bound to Plasma Protein: Because paroxetine is highly bound to plasma protein, administration of Paxil CR to a patient taking another drug that is highly protein bound may cause increased free concentrations of the other drug, potentially resulting in adverse events. Conversely, adverse effects could result from displacement of paroxetine by other highly bound drugs.

Alcohol: Although paroxetine does not increase the impairment of mental and motor skills caused by alcohol, patients should be advised to avoid alcohol while taking Paxil CR.

Lithium: A multiple-dose study with immediate-release paroxetine hydrochloride has shown that there is no pharmacokinetic interaction between paroxetine and lithium carbonate. However, since there is little clinical experience, the concurrent administration of Paxil CR (paroxetine hydrochloride) and lithium should be undertaken with caution.

Digoxin: The steady-state pharmacokinetics of paroxetine was not altered when administered with digoxin at steady state. Mean digoxin AUC at steady state decreased by 15% in the presence of paroxetine. Since there is little clinical experience, the concurrent administration of Paxil CR (paroxetine hydrochloride) and digoxin should be undertaken with caution.

Diazepam: Under steady-state conditions, diazepam does not appear to affect paroxetine kinetics. The effects of paroxetine on diazepam were not evaluated.

Procyclidine: Daily oral dosing of immediate-release paroxetine (30 mg q.d.) increased steady-state AUC_{0-24}, C_{max} and C_{min} values of procyclidine (5 mg oral q.d.) by 35%, 37% and 67%, respectively, compared to procyclidine alone at steady state. If anticholinergic effects are seen, the dose of procyclidine should be reduced.

Beta-Blockers: In a study where propranolol (80 mg b.i.d.) was dosed orally for 18 days, the established steady-state plasma concentrations of propranolol were unaltered during co-administration with immediate-release paroxetine (30 mg q.d.) for the final 10 days. The effects of propranolol on paroxetine have not been evaluated (see ADVERSE REACTIONS–Postmarketing Reports).

Theophylline: Reports of elevated theophylline levels associated with immediate-release paroxetine treatment have been reported. While this interaction has not been formally studied, it is recommended that theophylline levels be monitored when these drugs are concurrently administered.

Electroconvulsive Therapy (ECT): There are no clinical studies of the combined use of ECT and Paxil CR.

Carcinogenesis, Mutagenesis, Impairment of Fertility

Carcinogenesis: Two-year carcinogenicity studies were conducted in rodents given paroxetine in the diet at 1, 5, and 25 mg/kg/day (mice) and 1, 5, and 20 mg/kg/day (rats). These doses are up to approximately 2 (mouse) and 3 (rat) times the maximum recommended human dose (MRHD) on a mg/m^2 basis. There was a significantly greater number of male rats in the high-dose group with reticulum cell sarcomas (1/100, 0/50, 0/50 and 4/50 for control, low-, middle- and high-dose groups, respectively) and a significantly increased linear trend across dose groups for the occurrence of lymphoreticular tumors in male rats. Female rats were not affected. Although there was a dose-related increase in the number of tumors in mice, there was no drug-related increase in the number of mice with tumors. The relevance of these findings to humans is unknown.

Mutagenesis: Paroxetine produced no genotoxic effects in a battery of 5 in vitro and 2 in vivo assays that included the following: bacterial mutation assay, mouse lymphoma mutation assay, unscheduled DNA synthesis assay, and tests for cytogenetic aberrations in vivo in mouse bone marrow and in vitro in human lymphocytes and in a dominant lethal test in rats.

Impairment of Fertility: A reduced pregnancy rate was found in reproduction studies in rats at a dose of paroxetine of 15 mg/kg/day which is approximately twice the MRHD on a mg/m^2 basis. Irreversible lesions occurred in the reproductive tract of male rats after dosing in toxicity studies for 2 to 52 weeks. These lesions consisted of vacuolation of epididymal tubular epithelium at 50 mg/kg/day and atrophic changes in the seminiferous tubules of the testes with arrested spermatogenesis at 25 mg/kg/day (approximately 8 and 4 times the MRHD on a mg/m^2 basis).

Pregnancy

Pregnancy Category C

Reproduction studies were performed at doses up to 50 mg/kg/day in rats and 6 mg/kg/day in rabbits administered during organogenesis. These doses are approximately 8 (rat) and 2 (rabbit) times the maximum recommended human dose (MRHD) on a mg/m^2 basis. These studies have revealed no evidence of teratogenic effects. However, in rats, there was an increase in pup deaths during the first 4 days of lactation when dosing occurred during the last trimester of gestation and continued throughout lactation. This effect occurred at a dose of 1 mg/kg/day or approximately one-sixth of the MRHD on a mg/m^2 basis. The no-effect dose for rat pup mortality was not determined. The cause of these deaths is not known. There are no adequate and well-controlled studies in pregnant women. This drug should be used during pregnancy only if the potential benefit justifies the potential risk to the fetus.

Labor and Delivery

The effect of paroxetine on labor and delivery in humans is unknown.

Nursing Mothers

Like many other drugs, paroxetine is secreted in human milk, and caution should be exercised when Paxil CR (paroxetine hydrochloride) is administered to a nursing woman.

Pediatric Use

Safety and effectiveness in the pediatric population have not been established.

Geriatric Use

In worldwide premarketing clinical trials with immediate-release paroxetine hydrochloride, 17% of paroxetine-treated patients (approximately 700) were 65 years of age or older. Pharmacokinetic studies revealed a decreased clearance in the elderly, and a lower starting dose is recommended; there were, however, no overall differences in the adverse event profile between elderly and younger patients, and effectiveness was similar in younger and older patients (see CLINICAL PHARMACOLOGY and DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION).

In a controlled study focusing specifically on elderly patients with major depressive disorder, Paxil CR was demonstrated to be safe and effective in the treatment of elderly patients (>60 years of age) with major depressive disorder. (See CLINICAL TRIALS and ADVERSE REACTIONS—Table 2.)

ADVERSE REACTIONS

The information included under the "Adverse Findings Observed in Short-Term, Placebo-Controlled Trials with Paxil CR" subsection of ADVERSE REACTIONS is based on data from six placebo-controlled clinical trials. Three of these studies were conducted in patients with major depressive disorder and three studies were done in patients with panic disorder. Two of the studies in major depressive disorder, which enrolled patients in the age range 18 to 65 years, are pooled. Information from a third study of major depressive disorder, which focused on elderly patients (ages 60 to 88), is presented separately as is the information from the panic disorder studies. Information on additional adverse events associated with Paxil CR and the immediate-release formulation of paroxetine hydrochloride is included in a separate subsection (see Other Events).

Adverse Findings Observed in Short-Term, Placebo-Controlled Trials with Paxil CR:

Adverse Events Associated with Discontinuation of Treatment

Major Depressive Disorder

Ten percent (21/212) of Paxil CR patients discontinued treatment due to an adverse event in a pool of two studies of patients with major depressive disorder. The most common events (≥1%) associated with discontinuation and considered to be drug related (i.e., those events associated with dropout at a rate approximately twice or greater for Paxil CR compared to placebo) included the following:

Somnolence	1.4%	0.0%

In a placebo-controlled study of elderly patients with major depressive disorder, 13% (13/104) of Paxil CR patients discontinued due to an adverse event. Events meeting the above criteria included the following:

	Paxil CR (n=104)	Placebo (n=109)
Nausea	2.9%	0.0%
Headache	1.9%	0.9%
Depression	1.9%	0.0%
LFT's abnormal	1.9%	0.0%

Panic Disorder

Eleven percent (50/444) of Paxil CR patients in panic disorder studies discontinued treatment due to an adverse event. Events meeting the above criteria included the following:

	Paxil CR (n=444)	Placebo (n=445)
Nausea	2.9%	0.4%
Insomnia	1.8%	0.0%
Headache	1.4%	0.2%

Commonly Observed Adverse Events

Major Depressive Disorder

The most commonly observed adverse events associated with the use of Paxil CR in a pool of two trials (incidence of 5.0% or greater and incidence for Paxil CR at least twice that for placebo, derived from Table 1 below) were: abnormal ejaculation, abnormal vision, constipation, decreased libido, diarrhea, dizziness, female genital disorders, nausea, somnolence, sweating, trauma, tremor, and yawning.

Using the same criteria, the adverse events associated with the use of Paxil CR in a study of elderly patients with major depressive disorder were: abnormal ejaculation, constipation, decreased appetite, dry mouth, impotence, infection, libido decreased, sweating, and tremor.

Panic Disorder

In the pool of panic disorder studies, the adverse events meeting these criteria were: abnormal ejaculation, somnolence, impotence, libido decreased, tremor, sweating, and female genital disorders (generally anorgasmia or difficulty achieving orgasm).

Incidence in Controlled Clinical Trials

Table 1 enumerates adverse events that occurred at an incidence of 1% or more among Paxil CR-treated patients, aged 18-65, who participated in two short-term (12-week) placebo-controlled trials in major depressive disorder in which patients were dosed in a range of 25 to 62.5 mg/day. Table 2 enumerates adverse events reported at an incidence of 5% or greater among elderly Paxil CR-treated patients (ages 60-88) who participated in a short-term (12-week) placebo-controlled trial in major depressive disorder in which patients were dosed in a range of 12.5 to 50 mg/day. Table 3 enumerates adverse events reported at an incidence of 1% or greater among Paxil CR-treated patients (ages 19-72) who participated in short-term (10-week) placebo-controlled trials in panic disorder in which patients were dosed in a range of 12.5 to 75 mg/day. Reported adverse events were classified using a standard COSTART-based Dictionary terminology.

The prescriber should be aware that these figures cannot be used to predict the incidence of side effects in the course of usual medical practice where patient characteristics and other factors differ from those which prevailed in the clinical trials. Similarly, the cited frequencies cannot be compared with figures obtained from other clinical investigations involving different treatments, uses and investigators. The cited figures, however, do provide the prescribing physician with some basis for estimating the relative contribution of drug and nondrug factors to the side effect incidence rate in the population studied.

brand of

(paroxetine hydrochloride) Controlled-Release Tablets

DESCRIPTION

Paxil CR (paroxetine hydrochloride) is an orally administered psychotropic drug with a chemical structure unrelated to other selective serotonin reuptake inhibitors or to tricyclic, tetracyclic or other available antidepressant or antipanic agents. It is the hydrochloride salt of a phenylpiperidine compound identified chemically as (-)-trans-4*R*-(4'-fluorophenyl)-3*S*-[(3',4'-methylenedioxyphenoxy) methyl] piperidine hydrochloride hemihydrate and has the empirical formula of $C_{19}H_{20}FNO_3 \bullet HCl \bullet 1/2H_2O$. The molecular weight is 374.8 (329.4 as free base). The structural formula is:

Paroxetine hydrochloride is an odorless, off-white powder, having a melting point range of 120° to 138°C and a solubility of 5.4 mg/mL in water.

Each enteric, film-coated, controlled-release tablet contains paroxetine hydrochloride equivalent to paroxetine as follows: 12.5 mg–yellow, 25 mg–pink, 37.5 mg–blue. One layer of the tablet consists of a degradable barrier layer and the other contains the active material in a hydrophilic matrix.

Inactive ingredients consist of hydroxypropyl methylcellulose, polyvinylpyrrolidone, lactose monohydrate, magnesium stearate, colloidal silicon dioxide, glyceryl behenate, methacrylic acid copolymer type C, sodium lauryl sulfate, polysorbate 80, talc, triethyl citrate, and one or more of the following colorants: yellow ferric oxide, red ferric oxide, D&C Red No. 30, D&C Yellow No. 6, D&C Yellow No. 10, FD&C Blue No. 2.

CLINICAL PHARMACOLOGY

The efficacy of paroxetine in the treatment of major depressive disorder and panic disorder is presumed to be linked to potentiation of serotonergic activity in the central nervous system resulting from inhibition of neuronal reuptake of serotonin (5-hydroxy-tryptamine, 5-HT). Studies at clinically relevant doses in humans have demonstrated that paroxetine blocks the uptake of serotonin into human platelets. In vitro studies in animals also suggest that paroxetine is a potent and highly selective inhibitor of neuronal serotonin reuptake and has only very weak effects on norepinephrine and dopamine neuronal reuptake. In vitro radioligand binding studies indicate that paroxetine has little affinity for muscarinic, alpha$_1$-, alpha$_2$-, beta-adrenergic-, dopamine (D_2)-,5-HT_1-, 5-HT_2- and histamine (H_1)-receptors; antagonism of muscarinic, histaminergic and alpha$_1$-adrenergic receptors has been associated with various anticholinergic, sedative and cardiovascular effects for other psychotropic drugs.

Because the relative potencies of paroxetine's major metabolites are at most 1/50 of the parent compound, they are essentially inactive.

Pharmacokinetics

Paxil CR (paroxetine hydrochloride) tablets contain a degradable polymeric matrix (Geomatrix™, a trademark of Jago Pharma, Muttenz, Switzerland) designed to control the dissolution rate of paroxetine over a period of approximately 4 to 5 hours. In addition to controlling the rate of drug release in vivo, an enteric coat delays the start of drug release until Paxil CR tablets have left the stomach.

Paroxetine hydrochloride is completely absorbed after oral dosing of a solution of the hydrochloride salt. In a study in which normal male and female subjects (n=23) received single oral doses of Paxil CR at four dosage strengths (12.5 mg, 25 mg, 37.5 mg and 50 mg), paroxetine C_{max} and $AUC_{0\text{-}inf}$ increased disproportionately with dose (as seen also with immediate-release formulations). Mean C_{max} and $AUC_{0\text{-}inf}$ values at these doses were 2.0, 5.5, 9.0, and 12.5 ng/mL, and 121, 261, 338, and 540 ng.hr./mL, respectively. T_{max} was observed typically between 6 and 10 hours post-dose, reflecting a reduction in absorption rate compared with immediate-release formulations. The mean elimination half-life of paroxetine was 15 to 20 hours throughout this range of single Paxil CR doses. The bioavailability of 25 mg Paxil CR is not affected by food.

During repeated administration of Paxil CR (25 mg once daily), steady state was reached within two weeks (i.e., comparable to immediate-release formulations). In a repeat-dose study in which normal male and female subjects (n=23) received Paxil CR (25 mg daily), mean steady state C_{max}, C_{min} and $AUC_{0\text{-}24}$ values were 30 ng/mL, 20 ng/mL and 550 ng.hr./mL, respectively.

Based on studies using immediate-release formulations, steady-state drug exposure based on $AUC_{0\text{-}24}$ was several-fold greater than would have been predicted from single-dose data. The excess accumulation is a consequence of the fact that one of the enzymes that metabolizes paroxetine is readily saturable.

In steady-state dose proportionality studies involving elderly and nonelderly patients, at doses of the immediate-release formulation of 20 to 40 mg daily for the elderly and 20 to 50 mg daily for the nonelderly, some nonlinearity was observed in both populations, again reflecting a saturable metabolic pathway. In comparison to C_{min} values after 20 mg daily, values after 40 mg daily were only about 2 to 3 times greater than doubled.

Paroxetine is extensively metabolized after oral administration. The principal metabolites are polar and conjugated products of oxidation and methylation, which are readily cleared. Conjugates with glucuronic acid and sulfate predominate, and major metabolites have been isolated and identified. Data indicate that the metabolites have no more than 1/50 the potency of the parent compound at inhibiting serotonin uptake. The metabolism of paroxetine is accomplished in part by cytochrome $P_{450}IID_6$. Saturation of this enzyme at clinical doses appears to account for the nonlinearity of paroxetine kinetics with increasing dose and increasing duration of treatment. The role of this enzyme in paroxetine metabolism also suggests potential drug-drug interactions (see PRECAUTIONS).

Approximately 64% of a 30 mg oral solution dose of paroxetine was excreted in the urine with 2% as the parent compound and 62% as metabolites over a 10-day post-dosing period. About 36% was excreted in the feces (probably via the bile), mostly as metabolites and less than 1% as the parent compound over the 10-day post-dosing period.

Distribution: Paroxetine distributes throughout the body, including the CNS, with only 1% remaining in the plasma.

Protein Binding: Approximately 95% and 93% of paroxetine is bound to plasma protein at 100 ng/mL and 400 ng/mL, respectively. Under clinical conditions, paroxetine concentrations would normally be less than 400 ng/mL. Paroxetine does not alter the in vitro protein binding of phenytoin or warfarin.

Renal and Liver Disease: Increased plasma concentrations of paroxetine occur in subjects with renal and hepatic impairment. The mean plasma concentrations in patients with creatinine clearance below 30 mL/min. was approximately 4 times greater than seen in normal volunteers. Patients with creatinine clearance of 30 to 60 mL/min. and patients with hepatic functional impairment had about a two-fold increase in plasma concentrations (AUC, C_{max}).

The initial dosage should therefore be reduced in patients with severe renal or hepatic impairment, and upward titration, if necessary, should be at increased intervals (see DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION).

Elderly Patients: In a multiple-dose study in the elderly at daily doses of 20, 30 and 40 mg of the immediate-release formulation, C_{min} concentrations were about 70% to 80% greater than the respective C_{min} concentrations in nonelderly subjects. Therefore the initial dosage in the elderly should be reduced (see DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION).

Clinical Trials

Major Depressive Disorder

The efficacy of Paxil CR controlled-release tablets as a treatment for major depressive disorder has been established in two 12-week, flexible dose, placebo-controlled studies of patients with DSM-IV Major Depressive Disorder. One study included patients in the age range 18-65 years, and a second study included elderly patients, ranging in age from 60-88. In both studies, Paxil CR was shown to be significantly more effective than placebo in treating major depressive disorder as measured by the following: Hamilton Depression Rating Scale (HDRS), the Hamilton depressed mood item, and the Clinical Global Impression (CGI)–Severity of Illness score.

A study of outpatients with major depressive disorder who had responded to immediate-release paroxetine tablets (HDRS total score <8) during an initial 8-week open-treatment phase and were then randomized to continuation on immediate-release paroxetine tablets or placebo for 1 year demonstrated a significantly lower relapse rate for patients taking immediate-release paroxetine tablets (15%) compared to those on placebo (39%). Effectiveness was similar for male and female patients.

Panic Disorder

The effectiveness of Paxil CR in the treatment of panic disorder was evaluated in three 10-week, multicenter, flexible dose studies (Studies 1, 2, and 3) comparing paroxetine controlled-release (12.5 to 75 mg daily) to placebo in adult outpatients who had panic disorder (DSM-IV), with or without agoraphobia. These trials were assessed on the basis of their outcomes on three variables: (1) the proportions of patients free of full panic attacks at endpoint; (2) change from baseline to endpoint in the median number of full panic attacks; and (3) change from baseline to endpoint in the median Clinical Global Impression Severity score. For Studies 1 and 2, Paxil CR was consistently superior to placebo on two of these three variables. Study 3 failed to consistently demonstrate a significant difference between Paxil CR and placebo on any of these variables.

For all three studies, the mean Paxil CR dose for completers at endpoint was approximately 50 mg/day. Subgroup analyses did not indicate that there were any differences in treatment outcomes as a function of age or gender.

Long-term maintenance effects of the immediate-release formulation of paroxetine in panic disorder were demonstrated in an extension study. Patients who were responders during a 10-week double-blind phase with immediate-release paroxetine and during a 3-month double-blind extension phase were randomized to either immediate-release paroxetine or placebo in a 3-month double-blind relapse prevention phase. Patients randomized to paroxetine were significantly less likely to relapse than comparably treated patients who were randomized to placebo.

INDICATIONS AND USAGE

Major Depressive Disorder

Paxil CR (paroxetine hydrochloride) is indicated for the treatment of major depressive disorder.

The efficacy of Paxil CR in the treatment of a major depressive episode was established in two 12-week controlled trials of outpatients whose diagnoses corresponded to the DSM-IV category of major depressive disorder (see CLINICAL PHARMACOLOGY).

A major depressive episode (DSM-IV) implies a prominent and relatively persistent (nearly every day for at least 2 weeks) depressed mood or loss of interest or pleasure in nearly all activities, representing a change from previous functioning, and includes the presence of at least five of the following nine symptoms during the same two week period: depressed mood, markedly diminished interest or pleasure in usual activities, significant change in weight and/or appetite, insomnia or hypersomnia, psychomotor agitation or retardation, increased fatigue, feelings of guilt or worthlessness, slowed thinking or impaired concentration, a suicide attempt or suicidal ideation.

The antidepressant action of paroxetine in hospitalized depressed patients has not been adequately studied.

Paxil CR has not been systematically evaluated beyond 12 weeks in controlled clinical trials; however, the effectiveness of immediate-release paroxetine hydrochloride in maintaining a response in major depressive disorder for up to 1 year has been demonstrated in a placebo-controlled trial (see CLINICAL PHARMACOLOGY). The physician who elects to use Paxil CR for extended periods should periodically re-evaluate the long-term usefulness of the drug for the individual patient.

Panic Disorder

Paxil CR is indicated for the treatment of panic disorder, with or without agoraphobia, as defined in DSM-IV. Panic disorder is characterized by the occurrence of unexpected panic attacks and associated concern about having additional attacks, worry about the implications or consequences of the attacks, and/or a significant change in behavior related to the attacks.

The efficacy of Paxil CR (paroxetine hydrochloride) controlled-release tablets was established in two 10-week trials in panic disorder patients whose diagnoses corresponded to the DSM-IV category of panic disorder (see CLINICAL PHARMACOLOGY—Clinical Trials).

Panic disorder (DSM-IV) is characterized by recurrent unexpected panic attacks, i.e., a discrete period of intense fear or discomfort in which four (or more) of the following symptoms develop abruptly and reach a peak within 10 minutes: (1) palpitations, pounding heart, or accelerated heart rate; (2) sweating; (3) trembling or shaking; (4) sensations of shortness of breath or smothering; (5) feeling of choking; (6) chest pain or discomfort; (7) nausea or abdominal distress; (8) feeling dizzy, unsteady, lightheaded, or faint; (9) derealization (feelings of unreality) or depersonalization (being detached from oneself); (10) fear of losing control; (11) fear of dying; (12) paresthesias (numbness or tingling sensations); (13) chills or hot flushes.

Long-term maintenance of efficacy with the immediate-release formulation of paroxetine was demonstrated in a 3-month relapse prevention trial. In this trial, patients with panic disorder assigned to immediate-release paroxetine demonstrated a lower relapse rate compared to patients on placebo (see CLINICAL PHARMACOLOGY). Nevertheless, the physician who prescribes Paxil CR for extended periods should periodically re-evaluate the long-term usefulness of the drug for the individual patient.

CONTRAINDICATIONS

Concomitant use in patients taking either monoamine oxidase inhibitors (MAOIs) or thioridazine is contraindicated (see WARNINGS and PRECAUTIONS).

Paxil CR is contraindicated in patients with a hypersensitivity to paroxetine or to any of the inactive ingredients in Paxil CR.

WARNINGS

Potential for Interaction with Monoamine Oxidase Inhibitors

In patients receiving another serotonin reuptake inhibitor drug in combination with a monoamine oxidase inhibitor (MAOI), there have been reports of serious, sometimes fatal, reactions including hyperthermia, rigidity, myoclonus, autonomic instability with possible rapid fluctuations of vital signs, and mental status changes that include extreme agitation progressing to delirium and coma. These reactions have also been reported in patients who have recently discontinued that drug and have been started on an MAOI. Some cases presented with features resembling neuroleptic malignant syndrome. While there are no human data showing such an interaction with paroxetine hydrochloride, limited animal data on the effects of combined use of paroxetine and MAOIs suggest that these drugs may act synergistically to elevate blood pressure and evoke behavioral excitation. Therefore, it is recommended that Paxil CR (paroxetine hydrochloride) not be used in combination with an MAOI, or within 14 days of discontinuing treatment with an MAOI. At least 2 weeks should be allowed after stopping Paxil CR before starting an MAOI.

Potential Interaction with Thioridazine

Thioridazine administration alone produces prolongation of the QTc interval, which is associated with serious ventricular arrhythmias, such as torsade de pointes-type arrhythmias, and sudden death. This effect appears to be dose related.

An in vivo study suggests that drugs which inhibit $P_{450}IID_6$, such as paroxetine, will elevate plasma levels of thioridazine. Therefore, it is recommended that paroxetine not be used in combination with thioridazine (see CONTRAINDICATIONS and PRECAUTIONS).

PRECAUTIONS

General

Activation of Mania/Hypomania: During premarketing testing of immediate-release paroxetine hydrochloride, hypomania or mania occurred in approximately 1.0% of paroxetine-treated unipolar patients compared to 1.1% of active-control and 0.3% of placebo-treated unipolar patients. In a subset of patients classified as bipolar, the rate of manic episodes was 2.2% for immediate-release paroxetine and 11.6% for the combined active-control groups. Among 760 patients with major depressive disorder or panic disorder treated with Paxil CR in controlled clinical studies, there were no reports of mania or hypomania. As with all drugs effective in the treatment of major depressive disorder, Paxil CR should be used cautiously in patients with a history of mania.

Seizures: During premarketing testing of immediate-release paroxetine hydrochloride, seizures occurred in 0.1% of paroxetine-treated patients, a rate similar to that associated with other drugs effective in the treatment of major depressive disorder. Among 760 patients who received Paxil CR in controlled clinical trials in major depressive disorder or panic disorder, one patient (0.1%) experienced a seizure. Paxil CR should be used cautiously in patients with a history of seizures. It should be discontinued in any patient who develops seizures.

Suicide: The possibility of a suicide attempt is inherent in major depressive disorder and may persist until significant remission occurs. Close supervision of high-risk patients should accompany initial drug therapy. Prescriptions for Paxil CR (paroxetine hydrochloride) should be written for the smallest quantity of tablets consistent with good patient management, in order to reduce the risk of overdose.

Because of well-established comorbidity between major depressive disorder and other psychiatric disorders, the same precautions observed when treating patients with major depressive disorder should be observed when treating patients with other psychiatric disorders.

Discontinuation of Treatment with* Paxil CR*: Adverse events while discontinuing therapy with Paxil CR were not systematically evaluated in the clinical trials. However, recent clinical trials supporting the various approved indications for immediate-release paroxetine hydrochloride employed a taper phase regimen, rather than an abrupt discontinuation of treatment. The taper phase regimen used in generalized anxiety disorder and posttraumatic stress disorder immediate-release paroxetine hydrochloride clinical trials involved an incremental decrease in the daily dose by 10 mg/day at weekly intervals. When a daily dose of 20 mg/day was reached, patients were continued on this dose for 1 week before treatment was stopped.

With this regimen in those studies, the following adverse events were reported at an incidence of 2% or greater for immediate-release paroxetine hydrochloride and were at least twice that reported for placebo: abnormal dreams (2.3% vs 0.5%), paresthesia (2.0% vs 0.4%), and dizziness (7.1% vs 1.5%). In the majority of patients, these events were mild to moderate and were self-limiting and did not require medical intervention.

During marketing of immediate-release paroxetine hydrochloride, there have been spontaneous reports of similar adverse events, which may have no causal relationship to the drug, upon the discontinuation of immediate-release paroxetine hydrochloride (particularly when abrupt), including the following: dizziness, sensory disturbances (e.g., paresthesias such as electric shock sensations), agitation, anxiety, nausea, and sweating. These events are generally self-limiting. Similar events have been reported for other selective serotonin reuptake inhibitors.

Patients should be monitored for these symptoms when discontinuing treatment, regardless of the indication for which Paxil CR is being prescribed. A gradual reduction in the dose rather than abrupt cessation is recommended whenever possible. If intolerable symptoms occur following a decrease in the dose or upon discontinuation of treatment, then resuming the previously prescribed dose may be considered. Subsequently, the physician may continue decreasing the dose but at a more gradual rate (see DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION).

Hyponatremia: Several cases of hyponatremia have been reported with immediate-release paroxetine hydrochloride. The hyponatremia appeared to be reversible when paroxetine was discontinued. The majority of these occurrences have been in elderly individuals, some in patients taking diuretics or who were otherwise volume depleted.

Abnormal Bleeding: There have been several reports of abnormal bleeding (mostly ecchymosis and purpura) associated with immediate-release paroxetine hydrochloride treatment, including a report of impaired platelet aggregation. While a causal relationship to paroxetine is unclear, impaired platelet aggregation may result from platelet serotonin depletion and contribute to such occurrences.

Use in Patients with Concomitant Illness: Clinical experience with immediate-release paroxetine hydrochloride in patients with certain concomitant systemic illness is limited. Caution is advisable in using Paxil CR in patients with diseases or conditions that could affect metabolism or hemodynamic responses.

As with other SSRIs, mydriasis has been infrequently reported in premarketing studies with paroxetine hydrochloride. A few cases of acute angle closure glaucoma associated with therapy with immediate-release paroxetine have been reported in the literature. As mydriasis can cause acute angle closure in patients with narrow angle glaucoma, caution should be used when Paxil CR is prescribed for patients with narrow angle glaucoma.

Effects were similar in patients with and without diabetes based on data from both COPERNICUS and the U.S. trials described below.

The effect on mortality was principally the result of a reduction in the rate of sudden death among patients without worsening heart failure.

Patients' global assessments showed significant improvement following treatment with carvedilol in COPERNICUS.

The protocol also specified that hospitalizations would be assessed. Fewer patients on Coreg than on placebo were hospitalized for any reason (198 vs. 268, p=0.0001), for cardiovascular reasons (246 vs. 314, p=0.0003), or for worsening heart failure (372 vs. 432, p=0.0029).

Coreg (carvedilol) had a consistent and beneficial effect on all-cause mortality as well as the combined end points of all-cause mortality plus hospitalization (total, CV or for heart failure) in the overall study population and in all subgroups examined, including men and women, elderly and non-elderly, blacks and non-blacks.

Carvedilol was also studied in five other multicenter, placebo-controlled studies.

Four U.S. multicenter, double-blind, placebo-controlled studies enrolled 1,094 patients (696 randomized to carvedilol) with NYHA class II-III heart failure and ejection fraction <0.35. The vast majority were on digitalis, diuretics, and an ACE inhibitor at study entry. Patients were assigned to the studies based upon exercise ability. An Australia-New Zealand double-blind, placebo-controlled study enrolled 415 patients (half randomized to carvedilol) with less severe heart failure. All protocols excluded patients expected to undergo cardiac transplantation during the 7.5 to 15 months of double-blind follow-up. All randomized patients had tolerated a 2-week course on carvedilol 6.25 mg b.i.d.

In each study, there was a primary end point, either progression of heart failure (one U.S. study) or exercise tolerance (two U.S. studies meeting enrollment goals and the Australia-New Zealand study). There were many secondary end points specified in these studies, including NYHA classification, patient and physician global assessments, and cardiovascular hospitalization. Death was not a specified end point in any study, but it was analyzed in all studies. Other analyses not prospectively planned included the sum of deaths and total cardiovascular hospitalizations. In situations where the primary end points of a trial do not show a significant benefit of treatment, assignment of significance values to the other results is complex, and such values need to be interpreted cautiously.

The results of the U.S. and Australia-New Zealand trials were as follows:

Slowing Progression of Heart Failure: One U.S. multicenter study (366 subjects) had as its primary end point the sum of cardiovascular mortality, cardiovascular hospitalization, and sustained increase in heart failure medications. Heart failure progression was reduced, during an average follow-up of 7 months, by 48% (p=0.008).

In the Australia-New Zealand study, death and total hospitalizations were reduced by about 25% over 18 to 24 months. In the three largest U.S. studies, death and total hospitalizations were reduced by 19%, 39% and 49%, nominally statistically significant in the last two studies. The Australia-New Zealand results were statistically borderline.

Functional Measures: None of the multicenter studies had NYHA classification as a primary end point, but all such studies had it as a secondary end point. There was at least a trend toward improvement in NYHA class in all studies. Exercise tolerance was the primary end point in 3 studies; in none was a statistically significant effect found.

Subjective Measures: Quality of life, as measured with a standard questionnaire (a primary end point in one study), was unaffected by carvedilol. However, patients' and investigators' global assessments showed significant improvement in most studies.

Mortality: Overall, in these four U.S. trials, mortality was reduced, nominally significantly so in 2 studies.

Hypertension

Coreg (carvedilol) was studied in two placebo-controlled trials that utilized twice-daily dosing, at total daily doses of 12.5 to 50 mg. In these and other studies, the starting dose did not exceed 12.5 mg. At 50 mg per day, Coreg reduced sitting trough (12-hour) blood pressure by about 9/5.5 mm Hg; at 25 mg/day the effect was about 7.5/3.5 mm Hg. Comparisons of trough to peak blood pressure showed a trough to peak ratio for blood pressure response of about 65%. Heart rate fell by about 7.5 beats per minute at 50 mg/day. In general, as is true for other β-blockers, responses were smaller in black than non-black patients. There were no age- or gender-related differences in response.

The peak antihypertensive effect occurred 1 to 2 hours after a dose. The dose-related blood pressure response was accompanied by a dose-related increase in adverse effects (see ADVERSE REACTIONS).

INDICATIONS AND USAGE

Congestive Heart Failure

Coreg is indicated for the treatment of mild to severe heart failure of ischemic or cardiomyopathic origin, usually in addition to diuretics, ACE inhibitor, and digitalis, to increase survival and, also, to reduce the risk of hospitalization.

Coreg may be used in patients unable to tolerate an ACE inhibitor and may also be used in patients who are or are not receiving digitalis, hydralazine or nitrate therapy.

Hypertension

Coreg (carvedilol) is also indicated for the management of essential hypertension. It can be used alone or in combination with other antihypertensive agents, especially thiazide-type diuretics (see PRECAUTIONS, Drug Interactions).

CONTRAINDICATIONS

Coreg is contraindicated in patients with bronchial asthma (two cases of death from status asthmaticus have been reported in patients receiving single doses of Coreg) or related bronchospastic conditions, second- or third-degree AV block, sick sinus syndrome or severe bradycardia (unless a permanent pacemaker is in place), or in patients with cardiogenic shock or who have decompensated heart failure requiring the use of intravenous inotropic therapy. Such patients should first be weaned from intravenous therapy before initiating Coreg.

Use of Coreg in patients with clinically manifest hepatic impairment is not recommended.

Coreg is contraindicated in patients with hypersensitivity to the drug.

WARNINGS

Hepatic Injury: Mild hepatocellular injury, confirmed by rechallenge, has occurred rarely with Coreg therapy in the treatment of hypertension. In controlled studies of hypertensive patients, the incidence of liver function abnormalities reported as adverse experiences was 1.1% (13 of 1,142 patients) in patients receiving Coreg and 0.9% (4 of 462 patients) in those receiving placebo. One patient receiving carvedilol in a placebo-controlled trial withdrew for abnormal hepatic function.

In controlled studies of primarily mild-to-moderate congestive heart failure, the incidence of liver function abnormalities reported as adverse experiences was 5.0% (38 of 765 patients) in patients receiving Coreg and 4.6% (20 of 437 patients) in those receiving placebo. Three patients receiving Coreg (0.4%) and two patients receiving placebo (0.5%) in placebo-controlled trials withdrew for abnormal hepatic function. Similarly, in a long-term, placebo-controlled trial in severe heart failure, there was no difference in the incidence of liver function abnormalities reported as adverse experiences between patients receiving Coreg and those receiving placebo. No patients receiving Coreg and one patient receiving placebo (0.09%) withdrew for hepatitis. In addition, patients treated with Coreg had lower values for hepatic transaminases than patients treated with placebo, possibly because Coreg-induced improvements in cardiac function led to less hepatic congestion and/or improved hepatic blood flow.

Hepatic injury has been reversible and has occurred after short- and/or long-term therapy with minimal clinical symptomatology. No deaths due to liver function abnormalities have been reported in association with the use of Coreg.

At the first symptom/sign of liver dysfunction (e.g., pruritus, dark urine, persistent anorexia, jaundice, right upper quadrant tenderness or unexplained "flu-like" symptoms), laboratory testing should be performed. If the patient has laboratory evidence of liver injury or jaundice, carvedilol should be stopped and not restarted.

Peripheral Vascular Disease: β-blockers can precipitate or aggravate symptoms of arterial insufficiency in patients with peripheral vascular disease. Caution should be exercised in such individuals.

Anesthesia and Major Surgery: If Coreg treatment is to be continued perioperatively, particular care should be taken when anesthetic agents which depress myocardial function, such as ether, cyclopropane and trichloroethylene, are used. See OVERDOSAGE for information on treatment of bradycardia and hypertension.

Diabetes and Hypoglycemia: In general, β-blockers may mask some of the manifestations of hypoglycemia, particularly tachycardia. Nonselective β-blockers may potentiate insulin-induced hypoglycemia and delay recovery of serum glucose levels. Patients subject to spontaneous hypoglycemia, or diabetic patients receiving insulin or oral hypoglycemic agents, should be cautioned about these possibilities. In congestive heart failure patients, there is a risk of worsening hyperglycemia (see PRECAUTIONS).

Thyrotoxicosis: β-adrenergic blockade may mask clinical signs of hyperthyroidism, such as tachycardia. Abrupt withdrawal of β-blockade may be followed by an exacerbation of the symptoms of hyperthyroidism or may precipitate thyroid storm.

PRECAUTIONS

General

Since Coreg (carvedilol) has β-blocking activity, it should not be discontinued abruptly, particularly in patients with ischemic heart disease. Instead, it should be discontinued over 1 to 2 weeks, whenever possible.

In clinical trials, Coreg caused bradycardia in about 2% of hypertensive patients and 9% of congestive heart failure patients. If pulse rate drops below 55 beats/min., the dosage should be reduced.

In clinical trials of primarily mild-to-moderate heart failure, hypotension and postural hypotension occurred in 9.7% and syncope in 3.4% of patients receiving Coreg compared to 3.6% and 2.5% of placebo patients, respectively. The risk for these events was highest during the first 30 days of dosing, corresponding to the up-titration period and was a cause for discontinuation of therapy in 0.7% of Coreg patients, compared to 0.4% of placebo patients. In a long-term, placebo-controlled trial in severe heart failure (COPERNICUS), hypotension and postural hypotension occurred in 15.1% and syncope in 2.9% of heart failure patients receiving Coreg compared to 8.7% and 2.3% of placebo patients, respectively. These events were a cause for discontinuation of therapy in 1.1% of Coreg patients, compared to 0.8% of placebo patients.

Postural hypotension occurred in 1.8% and syncope in 0.1% of hypertensive patients, primarily following the initial dose or at the time of dose increase and was a cause for discontinuation of therapy in 1% of patients.

To decrease the likelihood of syncope or excessive hypotension, treatment should be initiated with 3.125 mg b.i.d. for congestive heart failure patients and 6.25 mg b.i.d. for hypertensive patients. Dosage should then be increased slowly, according to recommendations in the DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION section, and the drug should be taken with food. During initiation of therapy, the patient should be cautioned to avoid situations such as driving or hazardous tasks, where injury could result should syncope occur.

Rarely, use of carvedilol in patients with congestive heart failure has resulted in deterioration of renal function. Patients at risk appear to be those with low blood pressure (systolic BP<100 mm Hg), ischemic heart disease and diffuse vascular disease, and/or underlying renal insufficiency. Renal function has returned to baseline when carvedilol was stopped. In patients with these risk factors it is recommended that renal function be monitored during up-titration of carvedilol and the drug discontinued or dosage reduced if worsening of renal function occurs.

Worsening heart failure or fluid retention may occur during up-titration of carvedilol. If such symptoms occur, diuretics should be increased and the carvedilol dose should not be advanced until clinical stability resumes (see DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION). Occasionally, it is necessary to lower the carvedilol dose or temporarily discontinue it. Such episodes do not preclude subsequent successful titration of, or a favorable response to, carvedilol. In a placebo-controlled trial of patients with severe heart failure, worsening heart failure during the first 3 months was reported to a similar degree with carvedilol and with placebo. When treatment was maintained beyond 3 months, worsening heart failure was reported less frequently in patients treated with carvedilol than with placebo. Worsening heart failure observed during long-term therapy is more likely to be related to the patients' underlying disease than to treatment with carvedilol.

In patients with pheochromocytoma, an α-blocking agent should be initiated prior to the use of any β-blocking agent. Although carvedilol has both α- and β-blocking pharmacologic activities, there has been no experience with its use in this condition. Therefore, caution should be taken in the administration of carvedilol to patients suspected of having pheochromocytoma.

Agents with non-selective β-blocking activity may provoke chest pain in patients with Prinzmetal's variant angina. There has been no clinical experience with carvedilol in these patients although the α-blocking activity may prevent such symptoms. However, caution should be taken in the administration of carvedilol to patients suspected of having Prinzmetal's variant angina.

In congestive heart failure patients with diabetes, carvedilol therapy may lead to worsening hyperglycemia, which responds to intensification of hypoglycemic therapy. It is recommended that blood glucose be monitored when carvedilol dosing is initiated, adjusted, or discontinued.

Risk of Anaphylactic Reaction

While taking β-blockers, patients with a history of severe anaphylactic reaction to a variety of allergens may be more reactive to repeated challenge, either accidental, diagnostic or therapeutic. Such patients may be unresponsive to the usual doses of epinephrine used to treat allergic reaction.

Nonallergic Bronchospasm (e.g., chronic bronchitis and emphysema)

Patients with bronchospastic disease should, in general, not receive β-blockers. Coreg may be used with caution, however, in patients who do not respond to, or cannot tolerate, other antihypertensive agents. It is prudent, if Coreg (carvedilol) is used, to use the smallest effective dose, so that inhibition of endogenous or exogenous β-agonists is minimized.

In clinical trials of patients with congestive heart failure, patients with bronchospastic disease were enrolled if they did not require oral or inhaled medication to treat their bronchospastic disease. In such patients, it is recommended that carvedilol be used with caution. The dosing recommendations should be followed closely and the dose should be lowered if any evidence of bronchospasm is observed during up-titration.

Information for Patients

Patients taking Coreg should be advised of the following:

- they should not interrupt or discontinue using Coreg without a physician's advice.
- congestive heart failure patients should consult their physician if they experience signs or symptoms of worsening heart failure such as weight gain or increasing shortness of breath.
- they may experience a drop in blood pressure when standing, resulting in dizziness and, rarely, fainting. Patients should sit or lie down when these symptoms of lowered blood pressure occur.
- if patients experience dizziness or fatigue, they should avoid driving or hazardous tasks.
- they should consult a physician if they experience dizziness or faintness, in case the dosage should be adjusted.
- they should take Coreg with food.
- diabetic patients should report any changes in blood sugar levels to their physician.
- contact lens wearers may experience decreased lacrimation.

Drug Interactions

Inhibitors of CYP2D6; poor metabolizers of debrisoquin: Interactions of carvedilol with strong inhibitors of CYP2D6 (such as quinidine, fluoxetine, paroxetine, and propafenone) have not been studied, but these drugs would be expected to increase blood levels of the R(+) enantiomer of carvedilol (see CLINICAL PHARMACOLOGY). Retrospective analysis of side effects in clinical trials showed that poor 2D6 metabolizers had a higher rate of dizziness during up-titration, presumably resulting from vasodilating effects of the higher concentrations of the α-blocking R(+) enantiomer.

Catecholamine-depleting agents: Patients taking both agents with β-blocking properties and a drug that can deplete catecholamines (e.g., reserpine and monoamine oxidase inhibitors) should be observed closely for signs of hypotension and/or severe bradycardia.

Clonidine: Concomitant administration of clonidine with agents with β-blocking properties may county census. (Dec 2002 update)

Because phenothiazines may interfere with thermoregulatory mechanisms, use with caution in persons who will be exposed to extreme heat.

Phenothiazines can diminish the effect of oral anticoagulants.

Phenothiazines can produce alpha-adrenergic blockade

Thiazide diuretics may accentuate the orthostatic hypotension that may occur with phenothiazines

Antihypertensive effects of guanethidine and related compounds may be counteracted when phenothiazines are used concomitantly.

Concomitant administration of propranolol with phenothiazines results in increased plasma levels of both drugs

Phenothiazines may lower the convulsive threshold; dosage adjustments of anticonvulsants may be necessary. Potentiation of anticonvulsant effects does not occur. However, it has been reported that phenothiazines may interfere with the metabolism of Dilantin®‡ and thus precipitate Dilantin toxicity.

The presence of phenothiazines may produce false-positive phenylketonuria (PKU) test results.

Long-Term Therapy: Given the likelihood that some patients exposed chronically to antipsychotics will develop tardive dyskinesia, it is advised that all patients in whom chronic use is contemplated be given, if possible, full information about this risk. The decision to inform patients and/or their guardians must obviously take into account the clinical circumstances and the competency of the patient to understand the information provided.

To lessen the likelihood of adverse reactions related to cumulative drug effect, patients with a history of long-term therapy with Compazine (prochlorperazine) and/or other antipsychotics should be evaluated periodically to decide whether the maintenance dosage could be lowered or drug therapy discontinued.

Children with acute illnesses (e.g., chickenpox, CNS infections, measles, gastroenteritis) or dehydration seem to be much more susceptible to neuromuscular reactions, particularly dystonias, than are adults. In such patients, the drug should be used only under close supervision.

Drugs which lower the seizure threshold, including phenothiazine derivatives, should not be used with Amipaque®§. As with other phenothiazine derivatives, Compazine (prochlorperazine) should be discontinued at least 48 hours before myelography, should not be resumed for at least 24 hours postprocedure, and should not be used for the control of nausea and vomiting occurring either prior to myelography with Amipaque, or postprocedure.

ADVERSE REACTIONS

Drowsiness, dizziness, amenorrhea, blurred vision, skin reactions and hypotension may occur. Neuroleptic Malignant Syndrome (NMS) has been reported in association with antipsychotic drugs (see WARNINGS).

Cholestatic jaundice has occurred. If fever with grippe-like symptoms occurs, appropriate liver studies should be conducted. If tests indicate an abnormality, stop treatment. There have been a few observations of fatty changes in the livers of patients who have died while receiving the drug. No causal relationship has been established.

Leukopenia and agranulocytosis have occurred. Warn patients to report the sudden appearance of sore throat or other signs of infection. If white blood cell and differential counts indicate leukocyte depression, stop treatment and start antibiotic and other suitable therapy.

Neuromuscular (Extrapyramidal) Reactions

These symptoms are seen in a significant number of hospitalized mental patients. They may be characterized by motor restlessness, be of the dystonic type, or they may resemble parkinsonism.

Depending on the severity of symptoms, dosage should be reduced or discontinued. If therapy is reinstituted, it should be at a lower dosage. Should these symptoms occur in children or pregnant patients, the drug should be stopped and not reinstituted. In most cases barbiturates by suitable route of administration will suffice. (Or, injectable Benadryl®‖ may be useful.) In more severe cases, the administration of an anti-parkinsonism agent, except levodopa (see PDR), usually produces rapid reversal of symptoms. Suitable supportive measures such as maintaining a clear airway and adequate hydration should be employed.

Motor Restlessness: Symptoms may include agitation or jitteriness and sometimes insomnia. These symptoms often disappear spontaneously. At times these symptoms may be similar to the original neurotic or psychotic symptoms. Dosage should not be increased until these side effects have subsided.

If these symptoms become too troublesome, they can usually be controlled by a reduction of dosage or change of drug. Treatment with anti-parkinsonian agents, benzodiazepines or propranolol may be helpful.

Dystonias: Symptoms may include: spasm of the neck muscles, sometimes progressing to torticollis; extensor rigidity of back muscles, sometimes progressing to opisthotonos; carpopedal spasm, trismus, swallowing difficulty, oculogyric crisis and protrusion of the tongue.

These usually subside within a few hours, and almost always within 24 to 48 hours, after the drug has been discontinued.

In mild cases, reassurance or a barbiturate is often sufficient. In moderate cases, barbiturates will usually bring rapid relief. In more severe adult cases, the administration of an anti-parkinsonism agent, except levodopa (see PDR), usually produces rapid reversal of symptoms. In children, reassurance and barbiturates will usually control symptoms. (Or, injectable Benadryl may be useful. Note: See Benadryl prescribing information for appropriate children's dosage.) If appropriate treatment with anti-parkinsonism agents or Benadryl fails to reverse the signs and symptoms, the diagnosis should be reevaluated.

Pseudo-parkinsonism: Symptoms may include: mask-like facies; drooling; tremors; pill-rolling motion; cogwheel rigidity; and shuffling gait. Reassurance and sedation are important. In most cases these symptoms are readily controlled when an anti-parkinsonism agent is administered concomitantly. Anti-parkinsonism agents should be used only when required. Generally, therapy of a few weeks to 2 or 3 months will suffice. After this time patients should be evaluated to determine their need for continued treatment. (Note: Levodopa has not been found effective in pseudo-parkinsonism.) Occasionally it is necessary to lower the dosage of Compazine (prochlorperazine) or to discontinue the drug.

Tardive Dyskinesia: As with all antipsychotic agents, tardive dyskinesia may appear in some patients on long-term therapy or may appear after drug therapy has been discontinued. The syndrome can also develop, although much less frequently, after relatively brief treatment periods at low doses. This syndrome appears in all age groups. Although its prevalence appears to be highest among elderly patients, especially elderly women, it is impossible to rely upon prevalence estimates to predict at the inception of antipsychotic treatment which patients are likely to develop the syndrome. The symptoms are persistent and in some patients appear to be irreversible. The syndrome is characterized by rhythmical involuntary movements of the tongue, face, mouth or jaw (e.g., protrusion of tongue, puffing of cheeks, puckering of mouth, chewing movements). Sometimes these may be accompanied by involuntary movements of extremities. In rare instances, these involuntary movements of the extremities are the only manifestations of tardive dyskinesia. A variant of tardive dyskinesia, tardive dystonia, has also been described.

There is no known effective treatment for tardive dyskinesia; anti-parkinsonism agents do not alleviate the symptoms of this syndrome. It is suggested that all antipsychotic agents be discontinued if these symptoms appear.

Should it be necessary to reinstitute treatment, or increase the dosage of the agent, or switch to a different antipsychotic agent, the syndrome may be masked.

It has been reported that fine vermicular movements of the tongue may be an early sign of the syndrome and if the medication is stopped at that time the syndrome may not develop.

Contact Dermatitis: Avoid getting the Injection solution on hands or clothing because of the possibility of contact dermatitis.

Adverse Reactions Reported with Compazine (prochlorperazine) or Other Phenothiazine Derivatives: Adverse reactions with different phenothiazines vary in type, frequency and mechanism of occurrence, i.e., some are dose-related, while others involve individual patient sensitivity. Some adverse reactions may be more likely to occur, or occur with greater intensity, in patients with special medical problems, e.g., patients with mitral insufficiency or pheochromocytoma have experienced severe hypotension following recommended doses of certain phenothiazines.

Not all of the following adverse reactions have been observed with every phenothiazine derivative, but they have been reported with 1 or more and should be borne in mind when drugs of this class are administered: extrapyramidal symptoms (opisthotonos, oculogyric crisis, hyperreflexia, dystonia, akathisia, dyskinesia, parkinsonism) some of which have lasted months and even years–particularly in elderly patients with previous brain damage; grand mal and petit mal convulsions, particularly in patients with EEG abnormalities or history of such disorders; altered cerebrospinal fluid proteins; cerebral edema; intensification and prolongation of the action of central nervous system depressants (opiates, analgesics, antihistamines, barbiturates, alcohol), atropine, heat, organophosphorus insecticides; autonomic reactions (dryness of mouth, nasal congestion, headache, nausea, constipation, obstipation, adynamic ileus, ejaculatory disorders/impotence, priapism, atonic colon, urinary retention, miosis and mydriasis); reactivation of psychotic processes, catatonic-like states; hypotension (sometimes fatal); cardiac arrest; blood dyscrasias (pancytopenia, thrombocytopenic purpura, leukopenia, agranulocytosis, eosinophilia, hemolytic anemia, aplastic anemia); liver damage (jaundice, biliary stasis); endocrine disturbances (hyperglycemia, hypoglycemia, glycosuria, lactation, galactorrhea, gynecomastia, menstrual irregularities, false-positive pregnancy tests); skin disorders (photosensitivity, itching, erythema, urticaria, eczema up to exfoliative dermatitis); other allergic reactions (asthma, laryngeal edema, angioneurotic edema, anaphylactoid reactions); peripheral edema; reversed epinephrine effect; hyperpyrexia; mild fever after large I.M. doses; increased appetite; increased weight; a systemic lupus erythematosus-like syndrome; pigmentary retinopathy; with prolonged administration of substantial doses, skin pigmentation, epithelial keratopathy, and lenticular and corneal deposits.

EKG changes–particularly nonspecific, usually reversible Q and T wave distortions–have been observed in some patients receiving phenothiazines.

Although phenothiazines cause neither psychic nor physical dependence, sudden discontinuance in long-term psychiatric patients may cause temporary symptoms, e.g., nausea and vomiting, dizziness, tremulousness.

Note: There have been occasional reports of sudden death in patients receiving phenothiazines. In some cases, the cause appeared to be cardiac arrest or asphyxia due to failure of the cough reflex.

DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION

Notes on Injection: Stability–This solution should be protected from light. This is a clear, colorless to pale yellow solution; a slight yellowish discoloration will not alter potency. If markedly discolored, solution should be discarded.

Compatibility–It is recommended that Compazine (prochlorperazine) Injection not be mixed with other agents in the syringe.

(For children's dosage and administration, see below.) Dosage should be increased more gradually in debilitated or emaciated patients.

Elderly Patients: In general, dosages in the lower range are sufficient for most elderly patients. Since they appear to be more susceptible to hypotension and neuromuscular reactions, such patients should be observed closely. Dosage should be tailored to the individual, response carefully monitored and dosage adjusted accordingly. Dosage should be increased more gradually in elderly patients.

1. To Control Severe Nausea and Vomiting: Adjust dosage to the response of the individual. Begin with the lowest recommended dosage.

Oral Dosage–Tablets: Usually one 5 mg or 10 mg tablet 3 or 4 times daily. Daily dosages above 40 mg should be used only in resistant cases.

Spansule* capsules: Initially, usually one 15 mg capsule on arising or one 10 mg capsule q12h. Daily doses above 40 mg should be used only in resistant cases.

Rectal Dosage: 25 mg twice daily.

I.M. Dosage: Initially 5 to 10 mg (1 to 2 mL) injected deeply into the upper outer quadrant of the buttock. If necessary, repeat every 3 or 4 hours. Total I.M. dosage should not exceed 40 mg per day.

I.V. Dosage: $2^{1}/_{2}$ to 10 mg ($^{1}/_{2}$ to 2 mL) by slow I.V. injection or infusion at a rate not to exceed 5 mg per minute. Compazine Injection may be administered either undiluted or diluted in isotonic solution. A single dose of the drug should not exceed 10 mg; total I.V. dosage should not exceed 40 mg per day. When administered I.V., do not use bolus injection. Hypotension is a possibility if the drug is given by I.V. injection or infusion.

Subcutaneous administration is not advisable because of local irritation.

2. Adult Surgery (for severe nausea and vomiting): Total parenteral dosage should not exceed 40 mg per day. Hypotension is a possibility if the drug is given by I.V. injection or infusion.

I.M. Dosage: 5 to 10 mg (1 to 2 mL) 1 to 2 hours before induction of anesthesia (repeat once in 30 minutes, if necessary), or to control acute symptoms during and after surgery (repeat once if necessary).

I.V. Dosage: 5 to 10 mg (1 to 2 mL) as a slow I.V. injection or infusion 15 to 30 minutes before induction of anesthesia, or to control acute symptoms during or after surgery. Repeat once if necessary. Compazine (prochlorperazine) may be administered either undiluted or diluted in isotonic solution, but a single dose of the drug should not exceed 10 mg. The rate of administration should not exceed 5 mg per minute. When administered I.V., do not use bolus injection.

3. In Adult Psychiatric Disorders: Adjust dosage to the response of the individual and according to the severity of the condition. Begin with the lowest recommended dose. Although response ordinarily is seen within a day or 2, longer treatment is usually required before maximal improvement is seen.

Oral Dosage: Non-Psychotic Anxiety–Usual dosage is 5 mg 3 or 4 times daily, by Spansule capsule, usually one 15 mg capsule on arising or one 10 mg capsule q12h. Do not administer in doses of more than 20 mg per day or for longer than 12 weeks.

PEDIARIX™ [Diphtheria and Tetanus Toxoids and Acellular Pertussis Adsorbed, Hepatitis B (Recombinant) and Inactivated Poliovirus Vaccine Combined] continued

PEDIARIX should be administered by intramuscular injection. The preferred sites are the anterolateral aspects of the thigh or the deltoid muscle of the upper arm. The vaccine should not be injected in the gluteal area or areas where there may be a major nerve trunk. Gluteal injections may result in suboptimal hepatitis B immune response. Before injection, the skin at the injection site should be cleaned and prepared with a suitable germicide. After insertion of the needle, aspirate to ensure that the needle has not entered a blood vessel.

Do not administer this product subcutaneously or intravenously.

Recommended Schedule: The primary immunization series for PEDIARIX is 3 doses of 0.5 mL, given intramuscularly, at 6- to 8-week intervals (preferably 8 weeks). The customary age for the first dose is 2 months of age, but it may be given starting at 6 weeks of age.

PEDIARIX should not be administered to any infant before the age of 6 weeks. Only monovalent hepatitis B vaccine can be used for the birth dose.

Infants born of HBsAg-positive mothers should receive HBIG and Hepatitis B Vaccine (Recombinant) within 12 hours of birth at separate sites and should complete the hepatitis B vaccination series according to a particular schedule.[36] (See manufacturer's prescribing information for Hepatitis B Vaccine [Recombinant]).

Infants born of mothers of unknown HBsAg status should receive Hepatitis B Vaccine (Recombinant) within 12 hours of birth and should complete the hepatitis B vaccination series according to a particular schedule.[36] (See manufacturer's prescribing information for Hepatitis B Vaccine [Recombinant]).

The administration of PEDIARIX for completion of the hepatitis B vaccination series in infants who were born of HBsAg-positive mothers and who received monovalent Hepatitis B Vaccine (Recombinant) and HBIG has not been studied.

Modified Schedules: Children Previously Vaccinated With One or More Doses of Hepatitis B Vaccine: Infants born of HBsAg-negative mothers and who received a dose of hepatitis B vaccine at or shortly after birth may be administered 3 doses of PEDIARIX according to the recommended schedule. However, data are limited regarding the safety of PEDIARIX in such infants (see ADVERSE REACTIONS). There are no data to support the use of a 3-dose series of PEDIARIX in infants who have previously received more than one dose of hepatitis B vaccine. PEDIARIX may be used to complete a hepatitis B vaccination series in infants who have received 1 or more doses of Hepatitis B Vaccine (Recombinant) and who are also scheduled to receive the other vaccine components of PEDIARIX. However, the safety and efficacy of PEDIARIX in such infants have not been studied.

Children Previously Vaccinated With One or More Doses of INFANRIX: PEDIARIX may be used to complete the first 3 doses of the DTaP series in infants who have received 1 or 2 doses of INFANRIX and are also scheduled to receive the other vaccine components of PEDIARIX. However, the safety and efficacy of PEDIARIX in such infants have not been evaluated.

Children Previously Vaccinated With One or More Doses of IPV: PEDIARIX may be used to complete the first 3 doses of the IPV series in infants who have received 1 or 2 doses of IPV and are also scheduled to receive the other vaccine components of PEDIARIX. However, the safety and efficacy of PEDIARIX in such infants have not been studied.

Interchangeability of PEDIARIX and Licensed DTaP, IPV, or Recombinant Hepatitis B Vaccines: It is recommended that PEDIARIX be given for all 3 doses because data are limited regarding the safety and efficacy of using acellular pertussis vaccines from different manufacturers for successive doses of the pertussis vaccination series. PEDIARIX is not recommended for completion of the first 3 doses of the DTaP vaccination series initiated with a DTaP vaccine from a different manufacturer because no data are available regarding the safety or efficacy of using such a regimen.

PEDIARIX may be used to complete a hepatitis B vaccination series initiated with a licensed Hepatitis B Vaccine (Recombinant) vaccine from a different manufacturer.

PEDIARIX may be used to complete the first 3 doses of the IPV vaccination series initiated with IPV from a different manufacturer.

Additional Dosing Information: If any recommended dose of pertussis vaccine cannot be given, DT (For Pediatric Use), Hepatitis B (Recombinant), and inactivated poliovirus vaccines should be given as needed to complete the series.

Interruption of the recommended schedule with a delay between doses should not interfere with the final immunity achieved with PEDIARIX. There is no need to start the series over again, regardless of the time elapsed between doses.

The use of reduced volume (fractional doses) is not recommended. The effect of such practices on the frequency of serious adverse events and on protection against disease has not been determined.[10]

Preterm infants should be vaccinated according to their chronological age from birth.[10]

PEDIARIX is not indicated for use as a booster dose following a 3-dose primary series of PEDIARIX. Children who have received a 3-dose primary series of PEDIARIX should receive a fourth dose of IPV at 4 to 6 years of age and a fourth dose of DTaP vaccine at 15 to 18 months of age. Because the pertussis antigen components of INFANRIX are the same as those components in PEDIARIX, these children should receive INFANRIX as their fourth dose of DTaP. However, data are insufficient to evaluate the safety of INFANRIX following 3 doses of PEDIARIX.

Concomitant Vaccine Administration: In clinical trials, PEDIARIX was routinely administered, at separate sites, concomitantly with Hib vaccine (see CLINICAL PHARMACOLOGY). Safety data are available following the first dose of PEDIARIX administered concomitantly, at separate sites, with Hib and pneumococcal conjugate vaccines (see ADVERSE REACTIONS).

When concomitant administration of other vaccines is required, they should be given with separate syringes and at different injection sites.

STORAGE

Store PEDIARIX refrigerated between 2° and 8°C (36° and 46°F). Do not freeze. Discard if the vaccine has been frozen. Do not use after expiration date shown on the label.

!NOTES: Boulder Daily Camera 22 Dec 1984: 2B - Obit Susan Bosanko Gallagher. Susan Born 23 Aug 1892, Central City, CO daughter of James and Mary (Wiley) Bosanko. Susan Married 1910 James Gallagher who died in 1946. Susan Buried Fairmount Cemetery, Denver. Susan and her mother, were living with Mr. Gallagher. Mrs. Bosanko did housekeeping and Susan was listed as a boarder. It appears that Mr. Gallagher took a liking to the Susan (20 years his younger) and married her that year. Information about 2 daughters was gleaned from the obituary of the mother Susie, at the time of her death in 1984. Note to self: Call Howe Mortuary for more information.
